$300,000,000 TAX CUT URGED BY COOLIDGE

RICH PORTO RICAN DESERTS HUB WIFE

For North is North and South is South
And ne'er the twain shall meet.
—Now version.

Love which laughed at parental objections, radical differences and calendar difficulties has brought a peck of trouble to sleek haired young Emilio Fagot, son of a wealthy cattle dealer of Porto Rico and erstwhile student at a Boston business college.

Fagot is under arrest in Ponce, Porto Rico, as the result of a secret story of your intended marriage leaked out. All kinds of things have been said of your forthcoming marriage. Now what I want is your own story."

"On the way to Boston," said the school teacher—and just then the train shoved in awakening the depot master violently—

FOURTH ARREST IN THEFTS FROM BROKERAGE FIRM

A fourth arrest was made today in the theft of funds from Tucker, Anthony & Co., brokers at 74 State street, wh Joseph H. Wilder, forty-eight years old, of 34 Cochato road, Braintree, was taken at his home by Boston inspectors.

He is charged with the larceny of $8,500, also with conspiring to steal $90,000.

Late Saturday following indictments by the Suffolk County grand jury three other employes of the banking house were arrested.

They were Harry L. Dane, 44 years old, 16 Mineral street, Reading; Harry S. Woodward, 43, of 494 Belmont street, Watertown, and Willis G. Bancroft, 50, of 24 Loring street.

TELLS HOW HE WOOED WIDOW, 69

Old in Years, Says Bennett, but Her Mind and Love Are Youthful

Said the lanky reporter to the stranger in the depot at Taunton as the depot master dozed on the baggage truck in the Sabbath quiet:

"Are you John A. Bennett, the 24-year-old North Andover high school teacher who's going to marry Mrs. Elizabeth B. Ingalls, the 69-year-old North Dighton widow,"

"I am," said the stranger.

"Well," said the lanky reporter, "I have been looking for you since the story of your intended marriage leaked out. All kinds of things have been said of your forthcoming marriage. Now what I want is your own story."

"On the way to Boston," said the school teacher—and just then the train shoved in awakening the depot master violently—

"I will write my own story of this affair. I will write it exclusively for the Boston American. I will tell just what is going to happen and what is my idea of the flapper; why I prefer a near septuagenarian to a vain young thing; what I think of the

Sees Hell Filled If the Unitarians Are Wrong

New York, Dec. 10.—If Unitarians, as modernists in religion, are all doomed to hell, then "hell is going to be the dwelling place of a distinguished company of American leaders, according to Rev. Charles Francis Potter, pastor of the West Side Unitarian Church, in a sermon.

"Unitarians are an almost insignificant minority, numerically, compared with the mighty hosts of the orthodox," said Mr. Potter. "But of the sixty-three tablets in memory of great Americans in the Hall of Fame at New York University, twenty-two bear the names of Unitarians.

"And all we are entitled to, by right of proportion, is six one-hundredths of one tablet!"

100-POINT BREAK IN COTTON MART

New York, Dec. 10.—The local cotton market today broke 100 to 105 points below Saturday's close on weak Liverpool cables and a readjustment of ideas as to the next crop estimate.

Liquidation carried January down to 32.78 and March to 32.20.

This latest decline represents a drop of from $20 to $25 a bale from the season's high point on November 30.

The trade here now anticipates a yield of about 10,900,000 bales in the forthcoming government report, instead of previous estimates of from 9,250,000 to 9,500,000 bales.

COULD HAVE KISSED COAKLEY

Gordon, Berman's Partner, Said All Were Happy After Corcoran Was Called Off

Take a peek behind the scenes as Isaac Gordon, former hotel partner of Myer Berman, when the old Higgins Oyster House, Court street, was enjoying its palmy days, and see what went on.

Berman is suing Daniel H. Coakley to recover $50,000 he charges was "shaken" from him back in 1916.

The basis for the alleged shakedown" was a threatened batch of trouble for Berman.

William J. "Big Bill" Corcoran, representing a client who demanded financial balm because his wife had gone to Berman's place with a man not her husband.

Gordon was on the witness stand today, a witness for Coakley, and told how his former partner Berman acted, when in Coakley's office, the demand for $50,000 was made to "settle the case."

"Coakley and Corcoran went out of the room to fix up the settlement

DEATH OF 9 LAID TO R. R. ENGINEER

Erie, Pa., Dec. 10.—Three separate official investigations were under way here today as a result of the wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited, crack flyer of the New York Central Railroad, at Forsythe, N. Y., grade crossing, which took a toll of nine lives and caused injury to at least thirty other passengers.

The road's official investigation to determine the actual cause of the wreck, which resulted when section one of the train, telescoped by another section, was conducted under direction of John Brogan, superintendent of the Erie division.

A coroner's probe to determine why bodies of the dead were removed from New York State to Erie was expected to end by tonight. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

The Interstate Commerce Commission also opened an investigation. The Forsythe grade crossing already this year has been responsible for fourteen deaths.

Blame for the wreck was placed

WIFE WON'T HEAR ROBB SENTENCED

"It seems to me a horrible thing that my brother should be sent to prison because a woman in trouble came to him for assistance," Mrs. George F. Rost of Medford, sister of Dr. William M. Robb, said today.

Dr. Robb is the Back Bay physician who a few days ago pleaded guilty to illegal surgery, bringing to an end the famous Tyngsboro suitcase mystery wherein Mrs. Alice Wolschendorff's corpse was found stuffed into suitcases floating in the Merrimac River.

Tomorrow he will go into East Cambridge Court to be sentenced.

PRESIDENT SEES BIG SURPLUS

Demands That It Be Used to Reduce Expenses Rather Than for Bonus

Washington, Dec. 10 (I.N.S.) — President Coolidge today transmitted to Congress his budget message with detailed arguments in opposition to a soldier's bonus and for a reduction in Federal taxes.

The message, submitted with comparative tables and the annual report of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, shows the estimate of expenditures of the Federal government for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1924.

He made his position known for the first time in transmitting to Congress his estimate of the expenditures of the federal government for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1924.

By continuing a policy of strict and drastic economy, the President declared, it will be possible to effect an annual reduction of more than $300,000,000 in federal taxes while "any program of new expenditures on a large scale would make tax reduction impossible for years to come."

The President said he was not unmindful of the demand for adjusted compensation for soldiers of the World War, but that he questioned if there was any "sound reason for such a measure" and believed the $360,000,000 surplus piled up in the treasury during the last two years, and the $385,000,000 surplus expected in the next fiscal year, (1925) should be utilized as a basis for a

POLICEMEN SAVE MAN'S LIFE BY USING "PRONE SYSTEM"

Patrolmen Butler and Fetton of the Roxbury Crossing station saved the life of Edward Wehle, 68, lodger at No. 63 Cedric street, Roxbury, today through their knowledge of the "prone method." Wehle was a victim of accidental gas poisoning.

Wehle was found in his room by his landlady, Mrs. Genesina M. Schaffer. Gas was flowing from a wall bracket. On the way to the City Hospital the patrolmen applied the treatment, bringing him back to consciousness.

LIFER, JAILED THROUGH KINK IN LAW, OUT AFTER 11 YEARS

Sentenced to life imprisonment because a law had not been indexed properly, Frank Davis of Charlestown was released on parole from State prison today after having served eleven years of his sentence. Warden Hendry credits Davis with being a model prisoner.

Davis was sentenced by Judge Chase in Middlesex Superior Court, in 1912, to life imprisonment, for armed robbery of a junk dealer in Cambridge.

A new law was in force at that time reducing the sentence for armed robbery, but it had not been indexed.

This may have had something to do with the parole granted today.

Davis, during his imprisonment, has become a wood carver, and is assured of plenty of work. He is forty years old. Should he violate his parole he will be sent back again for life.

John P. Mulvey, thirty years old, of Cambridge, sentenced at the same time, and through the same error, was released in July, 1922.

ENGINEER BLAMED IN FATAL RAIL CRASH; NINE KILLED, 30 HURT

THREE SEPARATE PROBES OF DISASTER ARE UNDER WAY

on the engineer of the third section in a statement issued by the New York Central today. The company declared the engineer had run by danger signals while section one was held up on the tracks ahead by an auto accident.

THE DEAD:

W. B. Donovan, Philadelphia, manager of the New Haven Baseball Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sullivan, Springfield, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Z. Simmons, No. 214 East Washington street, Springfield, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Sweet, No. 256 Windsor Boulevard, Los Angeles.

Mrs. C. A. Kinzie, Musical College, Chicago.

R. Parnell, porter on the train, No. 2114 West 146th street, New York.

SERIOUSLY INJURED:

John Ezeh, vice-president of the Fox Film Company, New York.

George E. Van Hagen, Sr., No. 1363 North Dearborn street, Chicago, laceration of arms and legs.

George E. Van Hagen, Jr., slightly.

Carl A. Kenzie, fracture of leg and shoulder.

George Weiss, president of the New Haven Baseball Club.

Colonel Isaac S. Hall, No. 72 Woburn street, West Medford.

John Lysle, New Bedford.

According to unofficial reports of the wreck, the first section of the flier stopped after hitting an auto at the Forsythe grade crossing. The occupants of the machine, residents of Wilkensburg, Pa., had leaped before the crash.

Section two was flagged and a brakeman, F. C. Ackerman, was sent back to flag the third section. His explanation of the crash follows:

"I grabbed three lanterns and my lantern and ran back at least the length of my train. I lighted one of my signals and then ran toward the fast-approaching No. 3 and lighted another.

"The third section rushed past me going more than twenty miles an hour, and a moment later I heard the crash."

PLOWS THROUGH CAR.

Charles Patterson of Suffalo, engineer, and E. J. Reuter, Buffalo, fireman, of the third section, declare that, due to heavy fog they failed to see the warning.

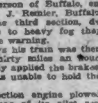
Patterson says his train was then going about thirty miles an hour, but so instantly applied the brakes that he was unable to hold the train.

The third section engine plowed through the rear of its pilot section, a wood car in which all of those killed were passengers.

In an instant the old coach had been ground to splinters. The two coaches just ahead were also jammed against each other and all the coaches were hurled from the tracks and piled up beside the roadbed.

New Englanders Among Dead and Injured

Of those who figured in the wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited, one of the killed, three of the injured and four others uninjured who aided in the rescue work, hailed from New England.



"Wild Bill" Donovan. Col. I. S. Hall.

W. B. ("Wild Bill") Donovan, manager of the New Haven baseball team of the Eastern League, is among the dead.

New Englanders who were injured are George Weiss of New Haven, owner of the New Haven baseball team of the Eastern League; Isaac S. Hall, vice-president of the Charles H. Tenney Company, Boston; John Lysle, publisher of the New Bedford Daily Sun. These three assisted in the rescue work.

Others who were passengers, but uninjured, and aided in the rescue work, are Ralph M. Torrey, swampscott; Joseph D. Brown, Lawrence; J. B. Pierson, Winchester; F. H. Eisel, Canton.

"Wild Bill" Donovan was born in Lawrence in 1876 but spent his boyhood in Philadelphia. He began his career as a baseball player in Sunbury, Pa., in 1895. Later he played with Pawtucket and Waterbury in the Connecticut State League.

He joined the Washington National team in 1899 and remained there until that club disbanded, when the National League was reduced from twelve to eight clubs. He also played with Brooklyn for four years. In 1903 he went to Detroit and made a name for himself as a pitcher. Since he retired from active playing he has managed the old Philadelphia Nationals, the Yankees, and last year, the New Haven club.

George Weiss, owner of this New Haven team, was travelling with Donovan.

Isaac S. Hall, who was among the injured, lives at No. 72 Woburn street, West Medford. He is a graduate of Yale, in the class of 1906. He was formerly treasurer of the Malden Gas Company.

Boston Man Escapes Injury in Wreck

J. Byron Pearson, president of the J. B. Pearson Clothing Company of No. 47 Bedford street, was one of the passengers in the wreck. A telegram to his son, Albert, assured his family he was uninjured. He was taken to a hospital at Erie, Pa., and later left for Chicago.

Mr. Pearson is sixty-five years old and lives at No. 323 Highland avenue, Winchester.

"Wild Bill" Donovan's Body is Sent Home

Fredonia, N. Y., Dec. 10.—The body of William E. (Wild Bill) Donovan, manager of the New Haven baseball club, killed in the wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited, was sent to his home in Philadelphia today.

price," said Gordon. "I sat with Myer. Myer kept wringing his hands and hollering 'I didn't register anybody.' I didn't introduce anyone. My family will be ruined. I'll give $20,000 to wipe it out."

"Was he nervous?" the witness was asked.

"Of course he was. All Jewish people are nervous. It is a marking of our race."

"What happened next?" the witness was asked. "I told Myer he should not do the talking; that if we were paying a lawyer, to let him do it. I said 'Now, why don't you tell the truth?'"

REFUSED TO PAY.

"We were sitting on a long couch. I said 'remember the bawling-out Captain Fitzgerald gave us one day. You denied it that time, you are denying it today.'

"Then Myer said 'well, I brought the woman over to where the man was, but I did not introduce them, because they had been coming there together for five or six weeks. I did register them, but I did not know she was a married woman.

"Then he said, 'Ike, I must settle this thing. It will ruin me.' I said 'It will ruin me too to pay that kind of money.' I said, "It is not my mistake; it is yours. I will not pay a nickel.'

"At this point," continued the witness, "Mr. Coakley and Mr. Cocoran came into the room again and Myer said, 'Is he gone? Is he gone?' (Meaning the injured husband)

"Mr Coakley said, 'No, he is here, but wants $35,000.' Myer said, 'I'll pay it.'"

"Ig ot in touch with Meyer's son, Sam. He said at first it was an awful lot of money but it meant more than $35,000 to him to have it settled and that his father had done right. I had two suites of Myer for a long time at the hotel. I kept telling him not to mix with the customers but to go home in and buy and to keep away from them.

"I paid one-third of the $35,000 and Myer one-third of the $15,000 fee to Coakley."

Q.—You remember what happened after the money was paid? A.—Yes, we were all very happy. We almost kissed Mr. Coakley. And he said 'if you love me so much you can now come across with some cash for me! I need my fee!'

BAWLS HIM OUT.

"Take off your hat."

It was bawled out with a Scottish burr in court today while former State Senator James H. Doyle was on the stand. He had lent money to Berman to start the hotel in operation, Doyle being in the wholesale whiskey game as a selling the hotel much liquor.

"Take off your hat."

It was bawled out in the tiny court room by Court Crier Robert McLeash, a bonafe Scot.

Judge Waitt sat up with a start. Attorney William H. Garland, Berman's counsel, bit off a question in the middle.

While Witness ex-Senator Doyle, forgetting his dignity, made a wild grab at his uncovered head, then sheepishly grinned.

McLeash had yelled at a spectator, but even Mr. Coakley was lifted from his seat.

Doyle testified as to the payments Berman made at Coakley's office to settle the case.

He described the visit of a detective to the Higgins House the day the register was seized upon order of District Attorney Pelletier.

"After he went away I said to Berman, 'That's a funny thing for a man to come for our register,' Berman said, 'Why don't you call up Coakley?' I said he told us to see Pelletier, which we did, and learned the register had been seized at the request of William J. Corcoran."

"Corcoran, the witness said, demanded $50,000 to settle the case on behalf of his mysterious client, but reduced his demand to $35,000.

"Berman and his sons were happy to settle," said Gordon.

RICH MAN QUITS BOSTON WIFE

indictment returned by the Suffolk Grand Jury last Spring. The indictment charges him with desertion

The American learned today that the wife Fagot deserted is no other than the former Helen Victoria West of No. 33 Washburn street, Dorchester.

Fagot came to the United States from Porto Rico in 1921. Like other sons of wealthy South American families, Emilio came here for education. Like many others of the same sort, he spent his spare time initiating North American girls into the mysteries of South American love making.

Emilio met Helen V. West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maximilian West of Dorchester. Helen's blond beauty proved a strong attraction to the black-haired Porto Rican.

On April 24, 1922, Emilio Fagot, Jr., and Helen Victoria West filed marriage intentions at the Boston City Hall. Fagot gave his age as twenty-two, Miss West as twenty-one.

Came a telegram to Boston officials requesting them not to issue the license to Fagot because he was, in reality, but eighteen years old. The telegram was sent by his aunt, Mrs. C. C. Smith, of No. 501 West 136th street, New York.

When the prospective young bridegroom went to City Hall at the expiration of the five-day period, the license was refused. There was consternation at the home of the bride, where preparations had been made for a happy wedding.

"We will wait until Emilio is of age," said Helen. "Our love will live forever."

COMING HERE FOR TRIAL.

The public soon forgot the affair but it now develops that Emilio and Helen went to New York the following month and were married there. Soon after the wedding young Emilio scurried back to Porto Rico "to prepare a home."

For two months small remittances came from Porto Rico. The wealthy young bridegroom sent about $400 in all. Then nothing. No letters. No money.

REBELS MARCH ON MEXICAN CAPITAL

Mexico City, Dec. 8.—via Laredo, Tex., Dec. 10 (AP).—(Delayed).—Capture of Jalapa, capital of the State of Vera Cruz, this (Saturday) morning, by rebel forces, was officially confirmed here tonight. With this slight success it was declared in official quarters that the revolt headed by General Guadalupe Sanchez, who favors the Presidential candidacy of Adolfo de la Huerta, had reached the maximum development possible with the nucleus of the outbreak centred at the city of Vera Cruz and in the States of Guadalajara and Jalisco.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Insurgent troops have left Vera Cruz under orders for an advance toward Mexico City. At various points along the Inter-Oceanic Railway they will be joined by other contingents and the united forces will then proceed toward the capital advancing in two directions.

It is estimated that about 10,000 troops are available for the movement.

The steamer Platanero Alegria is carrying to New Orleans Teodoro Tressieres and Enrique Soldenar, who are to go to New York as special confidential agents of the provisional government.

A detachment of Obregon troops is reported to have been defeated in a skirmish that took place in Nayarit territory. Generals Ortega and Mayn, loyalists, were killed in the engagement.

"Mrs. Robb," Mr. Root said, "is at the point of a nervous breakdown. She has suffered a trying ordeal. We both feel it would be heartless to embarrass my brother by being present in the courtroom when he is sentenced. Only his good heartedness got him into this difficulty."

Mrs. Wolschendorff, mother of four children, was living apart from her husband when she went to Dr. Robb for treatment. Dr. Daniel H. Swope of Brockton, alleged to have sent her, is under indictment charged with being an accessory in the case. He will plead this week.

Today Dane, Wilder and Woodward pleaded guilty in Superior Court. Each was held in $15,000.

The total theft from the brokers is alleged to be $150,000. In 1924, it is alleged, Wilder, Dane and Woodward conspired to steal a million dollars. In 1926, Wilder is charged with having engineered a theft as late as February last.

He was arrested by Inspectors Haggerty and Farrell of the bank squad. All men implicated were employes.

Widow's Cooking, Not Cash, Wooed Young Man

John A. Bennet, twenty-six, North Andover teacher, will wed Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ingalls, sixty-nine-year-old Taunton widow, on New Year's night.

Mrs. Ingalls is not wealthy. She has a few thousands of dollars and a $3,200 sedan automobile.

Relatives, she said, told her repeatedly that the school master was marrying her for what money she possesses. She also charges that they accuse her of hiding her age—that she is seventy-three years old.

She won "her John" as she calls him, via the old-fashioned route of good home cooking. She intends to feed him even better when they are wed. She says she is old-fashioned, but strikes one modern note. She believes in birth control.

COOLIDGE FOR BIG TAX CUT

sweeping reduction of taxes so that the taxpayer who was "stockholders in the business corporation of the United States" could share in the government's good fortune and be materially and immediately benefited.

FROM PEOPLE'S POCKETS.

"The government," Mr. Coolidge declared, "has no money to distribute to any class of its citizens that it does not take from the pockets of the people and the payment of a bonus to millions of our former soldiers could only be accomplished at a cost to the whole community, including the veterans themselves, far outweighing the benefits intended to be conferred. If I felt that a soldiers' bonus represented a great need and a proper obligation which should be fulfilled by this nation, I certainly would not make a recommendation which would be averse thereto.

"Our country is prosperous, and remunerative employment is available for the able-bodied veterans as well as for other citizens. For the disabled veterans of the war and the dependents of those who fell the country cannot do too much. It has already spent nearly two billions of dollars and is now spending nearly half a billion dollars yearly in their behalf.

JOBS FOR ABLE-BODIED.

"That obligation it must and will continue to fulfill in fullest measure, and it is one of the most important duties and privileges of the chief executive to minister to the wants and needs of these wards and creditors of the nation. But the fit and able-bodied veterans are offered the opportunities open to every other citizen.

"We have now reached a point in our financial program where we can lighten the tax burden of the people, which is an added reason for taking a firm stand against any form of expenditure of spending that would tend to absorb the expected margin between receipts and expenditures."

The government's expenditures for 1924 were estimated by the President at $2,298,080,444, or $566,957,644 less than for the current fiscal year.

Receipts for the coming fiscal year were placed at $3,693,767,978 so the surplus the President expects to have in the treasury on June 30, 1925 is $395,681,635, compared with $322,-639,624 for the current year.

TO REDUCE INCOME RATES.

"I recommend a revision of tax laws along lines which will effect a reduction of income taxes by taxing earned incomes more lightly than income from business or from investments; by reducing the percentages of the normal tax and by reducing the surtax rates, with commencement of their applications at $10,000 instead of $6,000," the President says.

"I also recommend the repeal of the tax on telegrams, telephones and leased wires and of the tax on admissions and revision of the miscellaneous taxes which are a source of inconvenience to taxpayers.

"On the other hand, amendments which would cause some increase of revenue, should also be made to existing income tax laws relative to deductions of capital losses, deductions from gross incomes for interest paid and non-business losses sustained where income from tax-exempted securities is involved; and the manner of taxing community income. These changes would reduce taxes by more than $3,000,000,000, which is safely within the probable surplus."

TO SHUT RUM RUNNERS.

The President said that in his message on the "State of the Union" he had presented the need for a material increase in the personnel and equipment of the United States Coast Guard for the purpose of combatting more thoroughly rum running and unlawful importation.

He explained mention of this was due to the fact that he planned to ask later for an appropriation of $20,000,000 to build up the coast guard in addition to an appropriation of $5,000,000 to pay for its operation during the coming fiscal year.

YOUNG TEACHER TELLS HOW HE WON WIDOW, 69

gossips in North Dighton and Taunton and also of the stories which have been printed concerning myself and bride to be. We will be married on New Year's night."

He climbed aboard and at the side of the reporter wrote in lead pencil the following story:

By JOHN A. BENNETT.

Her consideration for others was the first thing in Mrs. Ingalls that really appealed to me. She was always thinking of some way she could comfort others.

This was so different in my experience with any other of my former girl friends that the contrast was brought home to me stronger every day. When I went to North Brighton to teach school I was without a friend in the town. My only real friend and confidant was Walter K. Putney, formerly my school superintendent. He was more like a father than a superior.

When I returned from a Christmas vacation last year, being acquainted with Mrs. Ingalls I inquired if she would give me my meals. She was kind enough to accommodate me. Her various attentions following my coming to her home for my meals soon showed me how considerate of my comforts she was. I tried to reciprocate and so I took her to the movies often.

OLD IN YEARS ONLY

She is old in years only. But in her actions she is more like a woman many years her junior. She is alert and knows what is happening in the world today.

She like to go to the movies and I knew it. She had been kind and motherly to me and I thought I should show my appreciation in some way. I invited her to accompany me to the movies and she consented to go. Pretty soon we both realized that our friendship had ripened into love.

I suggested that we get married and settle down. She accepted my proposal and told me to go ahead and obtain the marriage license.

There is nothing now that will hinder our marriage. We have both agreed to it and I don't know as it is anybody's business if we are to be married.

When I left her home last Sunday night I took the notice told me I would be all right to take it and I promised to return it last night. I kept my promise the car is at her home now.

I took it so that I could bring my mother and father down to North Dighton to meet Mrs. Ingalls. The only reason I did not carry out these plans was because I feared the publicity which had been given to our impending marriage would react on my mother, who has been quite ill.

I felt that the less people saw to talk about, the less likely they would be to misconstrue any of my actions.

I feel that the townspeople of North Dighton have been unkind to both Mrs. Ingalls and myself. Though they may feel this marriage is a marriage of convenience on my part, they don't get away from the fact that I always have appeared prosperous, and none can truthfully say that I was ever stinted for money—either before or after I met Mrs. Ingalls.

I can say this for her. She does make a study of keeping her word, and that is more than can be said for the so-called "modern girl." The flapper who thinks she needs must have a "line" and prevariates as a matter of good taste.

AS WE THINK

Our forthcoming marriage has placed both Mrs. Ingalls and myself in a more or less embarrassing position. I feel that some of the reporters who visited her had very little regard for her feelings, or really had no interest in her other than that she was good "copy."

The kindest thing for the papers to do and the public, which patronizes them, is to leave us to ourselves and mind their own business.

So far each of us has been able to live and let live. We were both intelligent enough to know that our filing of marriage intentions would create a stir.

The fact that I have decided to take as my wife a woman much older than myself in years, has caused a deal of comment in typical of the general characteristics of the commentors.

In other words, I feel that as we think, so we are. And if any one can see any evil in our choosing each the other for a lifemate, then that person is plainly showing themselves as they really are.

In commenting on the fact that I never had many girl friends, some of the people, and some of the papers have been misinformed. I never was a hermit and keenly appreciate the society of the opposite sex.

Probably the very fact that I do know from experience more or less about the Modern Girl, has helped me towards making my plans as the husband of a real "old fashioned girl."

At the North Pole, What? The Rockefellers Will Know
Honor the Wright Brothers
Brooklyn Leads
Current Events
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company

WHAT WILL the navy find on the expedition soon, starting to the North Pole? No dog sleds for transportation, no crawling over ice hummocks, no water-level boat to freeze into the ice on this trip. But a great airship carrying scientists up in the clouds. That is exploring in style. Columbus and others ought to see it.

NO ONE knows what wealth,—oil, gold and other minerals may be found in the frozen regions. If they are found, men will find a way to reach them. Already the Rockefellers have developed oil within the Arctic Circle. To pipe the oil would cost fifty millions, which is more than it is worth now, but the Rockefellers look ahead. John D. Rockefeller, 424, a few centuries hence, may turn that oil into electricity on the spot and sell wireless power to flying ships taking the short route around the world. The captain will say, at dinner in the evening, to his neighbor: "I'm picking up power just now from an oil well that the original Rockefeller located inside the Arctic Circle, away back in the twentieth century. They say that the first Rockefeller was worth only a couple of billions, at most. It would surprise him to know how much his family is worth now."

OR THAT captain of the future may say: "It's lucky the people knew enough to take over all of the earth's natural resources; otherwise, we'd be paying an extravagant price to some owner of oil created millions of years ago, when the North Pole was in the tropics."

A WEEK from today the world will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Wright Brothers' first flight. It was short, crude, uncertain, but they flew.

And if the Fourth of July is a great day for Independence, the anniversary of that flight is an Independence Day even greater. Eventually we should have been independent of the British Kings, no doubt of that. The Wrights made us independent of the power of gravitation, a tyrant that had held us fastened to the ground for more than 100,000 years, and that holds us no longer.

"LIBERATORS of the Human Race" is the line that ought to be on the Wright Brothers' tomb, and this nation, when the time comes, must honor them with a monument worthy of them. They set men free.

WHICH CITY, do you suppose, surpassed all others in building cost, for 1923? It was not Los Angeles, or Chicago, or booming Detroit, but Brooklyn, one of the boroughs of New York City, with a building program of $300,500,000. Nearly $200,000,000 spent on dwellings, still leaving a great shortage.

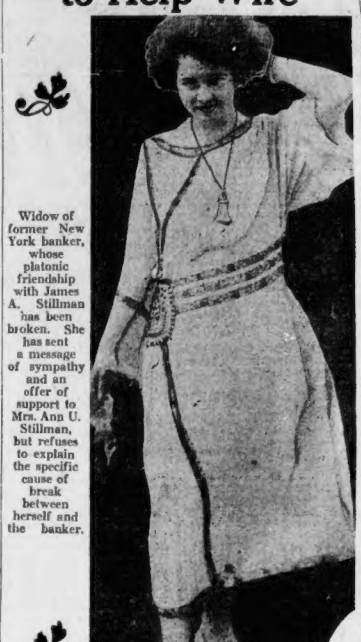
NO ONE knows which is to be the world's greatest city in future. Los Angeles will run to fifteen millions, at least. That is certain. Seattle, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and several others will be bigger than New York is now.

But Brooklyn will be the real New York City, and proud old Manhattan only a great office building, one little borough in a great city on Long Island stretching away from Montauk Point. That is why wide road building into the heart of Brooklyn from North, East and South Long Island should be no longer delayed.

FOR THE TIME, the world seems weary of its experiments in democratic government. Even Socialist Germany gives absolute power of dictatorship to the Cabinet, putting the orders of Chancellor Marx ahead of the parliament and the people.

ITALY WITH Mussolini, Spain with Primo Rivera, Russia with Trotsky and Lenin's handful ruling 120 millions—all have decided that safety lies in letting one strong man have his way. Even victorious, dominating France is in the hands of the military power. England struggles along as a democracy. We continue our interesting experiment—democracy tempered with financial and judicial overlordship.

Mrs. Talbert, Friend of Stillman, Wants to Help Wife



Widow of former New York banker, whose platonic friendship with James A. Stillman has been broken. She has sent a message of sympathy and an offer of support to Mrs. Ann U. Stillman, but refuses to explain the specific cause of break between herself and the banker.

MRS. JOSEPH TRUIT TALBERT

STILLMAN IS JILTED BY WIDOW

New York, Dec. 10 (Universal)—The platonic friendship between James A. Stillman and Mrs. Joseph Truit Talbot, widow of a former vice-president of the National City Bank, which was one of the sidelights of the celebrated Stillman divorce litigation, has been brought to a close.

This became known today when it was learned that Mrs. Talbert had sent a "message of sympathy and an offer of support' to Mrs. Anna U. Stillman.

Mrs. Talbert, who has just returned to New York after an absence of many months abroad, refused to explain the message or to state what was the specific cause of the break between her and the banker. She simply said:

TO AID MRS. STILLMAN.

"I would do anything I can for Mrs. Stillman. I should like to see her."

Nor would Mrs. Stillman throw any light on the matter, though she admitted receiving the message.

So close was the relationship between the banker and Mrs. Talbert that friends of the latter expected them to marry. Lately, though, she has been in a nervous condition. Today she said to a friend:

"I feel that I am an innocent victim of the Stillman case.

"After the death of my husband I came to New York from California and asked Mr. Stillman's advice about investments. This was in the Summer of 1920. He helped me and we renewed our friendship. Then his divorce suit flared into public notice. He seemed downcast at times and often sought my company. I did my best to cheer him up and he came to see me more and more frequently.

"Finally one day he told me I was his 'balance book,' and he wished he could marry a woman like me. These declarations were made by him often, sometimes in the presence of my children or others.

"Our friendship was very pleasant and very delightful while it lasted."

H. G. WELLS BEATEN BY BOTH OPPONENTS

London, Dec. 10.—H. G. Wells, the novelist, was again defeated for a seat in Parliament at last Thursday's election. Running as the Labor candidate for London University, he received 1,420 votes, against 4,087 for Sir Sydney R. Wells, Conservative, and 2,582 for Professor Foliard, Liberal.

OPEN RUM WAR BY SEIZING BOAT AND 94 CASES

New York, Dec. 10.—First blood in the prohibition navy's active war against rum runners with bottled holiday cheer was drawn by the defence forces today, when a speedy shore smuggling craft, the K-11101, was forced to pile up on a Staten Island beach and ninety-four cases of whiskey seized. Members of the crew escaped.

The police boat Manhattan saw the K-11101 heading for the Jersey Coast before dawn. The cutter gave chase and the smuggler turned seaward, but was rapidly being outdistanced when the crew pointed her nose toward the shore, piled her on the beach, leaving their contraband behind.

The campaign against rum runners began today, and it was said, would continue with unusual intensity until the holidays.

With nineteen vessels, said by port officials to be the largest rum fleet ever gathered off Long Island, ready to deliver their cargoes to the smaller craft, a lively warfare was anticipated.

Many small boats were reported to have started out under cover of darkness from many points along the coast for rum rgw. Several ships bringing liquor cargoes directly from Europe were said to have forced down prices and stimulated holiday trade.

HARVARD EXPERTS SEEK ANTI-TOXIN

Research work will be conducted by the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Committee, with a modification of the clinical work of the committee, it is announced. The after-treatment work of the committee will be abandoned and the research work, under Dr. Rosenau and a staff of experts, inaugurated to perfect an anti-tox'n effective in heading off the disease.

This work will be conducted at the research laboratories of Harvard Medical School. The work will cost $12,000 a year for the next two or three years. Fear of the disease breaking out in virulent form, as it did in 1916, prompted this decision by the directors.

PREDICT 'EQUAL PAY' VICTORY

Baldwin Sees King; Decides to Stick

'EQUAL PAY' VICTORY IS LOOKED FOR

Boston Voters Expected to Give Teachers Big Majority Tomorrow

Boston will go to bed tonight prepared to step out tomorrow and deal to the opponents of "equal pay for equal service" the most crushing defeat ever handed out at an election.

Boston will vote to give women high school teachers the same pay as men.

Why?

Because Boston believes that a Deity wise enough to give a woman the glorious privilege of bringing children into the world provided her with enough brains to properly instruct them. Never was a question so easily before decided. Never did persons prepare to flood the polls as they are this moment and vote "Yes" to a question that could have but that answer.

BIG MAJORITY EXPETCED.

The American, which waged a crusade to help these unfairly treated women, took no straw vote to decide the issue in advance. It wasn't necessary. On every hand was revealed evidence that Boston would tomorrow, by marking the little word "Y-E-S," decide an issue by a ratio of probably ten to one.

So join the tide Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Voters and tomorrow get your vote in early and make sure it is "Yes."

The question has been endorsed first and last by men and women prominent in all walks of life.

Prominent among them are: Daniel W. Lane, president of the Boston City Council, and City Councillor George F. Gilbody. Also William G. O'Hare and Dr. Frederick H. Bogan, members of the school committee.

ATTEMPT TO BEFOG ISSUE.

The majority members of the school committee believe the public incapable of deciding what is best for high school teachers, despite the fact that the public are most vitally interested.

An attempt has also been made to befog the issue by the statement that the elementary teachers will demand more money if the women of the high schools are placed on the same basis as men.

Supporters of the "equal pay" plan point out, however, that elementary teachers are already on the same basis as men, women high school teachers being the only ones against whom discrimination is shown.

This, it is declared, is in itself an argument for equal pay for women high school teachers who do exactly the same work as men.

BELIEVES IN EQUAL PAY.

"I believe in equal pay for equal service absolutely," said Miss Mellyn, an assistant superintendent of Boston schools, who receives the same pay as men doing the same work.

"Women teachers pass the same examinations," she added, "are subjected to the same tests, and have to fit pupils for college the same as the men have to. Since they are admitted under the same conditions, they are supervised the same, and their product is submitted in the same course, why shouldn't they have the same pay?"

President Daniel W. Lane of the City Council said:

"I voted for equal pay for equal service last year. Since then I have given the matter considerable study and as a result I shall vote for it again."

Representative Martin Hays of Brighton, who led the fight for the bill in the Legislature, said:

"I am very strongly in favor of equal pay for equal service. The women high school teachers who do the same work as men should receive the same pay. It seems like rank sex discrimination."

Boston Schoolmen Are Opposed to "Equal Pay"

Statements opposing "equal pay for equal service," were issued today by Albert F. Reed, president of the Boston Schoolmen's Economic Association and several other male teachers.

President Reed said the schoolmen of Boston are opposing equal pay as

Education Is Solution of Missing Girl Problem, Policewoman Finds

Declares Girls and Young Wives Must Be Taught to Avoid Mis'steps and Shown Consequence of Folly

This is the seventh of a series of articles written for the Boston American by the policewomen of Boston. In today's article Irene McAuliffe, who has written on missing girls and runaway wives, concludes her articles. In tomorrow's American another policewoman will continue the series.

By IRENE McAULIFFE
Boston Policewoman, Formerly of the Washington, D. C., Police.

Runaway wives present not only a more difficult, but a more touching problem than do runaway girls, because the runaway wives are so much more mistaken than the girls who take French leave from their homes.

Most runaway wives run away because they are selfish, greedy, unworthy, vain and indolent. Some because they are plain bad.

Missing girls run away because they are ambitious, restless, eager for opportunity for advancement.

With one class we have all the vices and weaknesses of human character. With the other there are some virtues to hearten one.

RESTLESS, HEARTLESS.

Just take the case of Annette, for example.

Annette has a hard working, clever capable husband. He is 35, she is 27. They have been married seven years. Until two years ago they lived in New York. Then they came to Boston.

Annette is a restless, selfish, heartless woman. Oh, there are so many of her type.

"Is your husband cruel?" I asked her. She flashed me a glance of scorn.

"He wouldn't dare to be cruel to me. He just bores me."

"But, my dear, don't you think that you bore him sometimes?" I asked.

"He has no right to be bored by me. When he comes home he wants to lie down and rest for an hour; or he wants to take me out to ride in the auto. As if I didn't want to see something and somebody beside him all the time!" she replied as she curled her upper lip like an angry dog.

But the facts did not bear out her story of the case. Indeed, Annette has no case at all.

RAN AWAY THREE.

Three times Annette has run away from her husband; always leaving word behind; always in a way to humiliate him. And then he moves heaven and earth to find her; lets his professional business go "to the dogs" and finally when he does find her it is with associates and with new friends not fit to tie the ribbon bows on her dainty slippers.

Gladly, eagerly he takes her back. Why? Is he a fool or a great sentimentalist? Is he a strong man or a weakling? I give it up.

Wives get that way because they have too much spare time on their hands. There never was a truer line than:

"Satan finds work for idle hands to do."

I know that the majority of runaway wives are idle wives. I have seen enough of them. I have talked with their husbands. I have talked with them. These wives do not care about the anguish and misery they heap upon their loving husbands' heads and the prime cause is selfishness.

Annette is pretty in an opulent way—but a little hard. But her wrong associates tell her how wonderfully beautiful she is, how well she dances, what a pretty mouth she has, how inspiring her eyes are.

CRAVES ADORATION.

She craves adoration. She basks in the silly admiration of the cheap sort of fellows who have a penchant for young married women—when their husbands are not in proximity. There you have the type of woman who runs away mostly.

The peculiar part of it all is that Annette's husband, and so many more of those husbands are willing to take their wives back. I have talked with many of them, and I believe it is because these men love their wives as few persons realize man can love.

Yes, this runaway wife problem is a big one, almost as big as the runaway girl problem—and just as important.

EDUCATION NEEDED.

I do not think we should condemn these erring girls and women. We should try to lift them up and place them back where they were. One great way to do this is to educate our girls and wives. Teach them what to avoid. Tell them the consequences of their folly in advance.

As I close my part of this series I pray that some mother may have gained something from my work. That some daughter will be prevented from making a fool of herself, that some restless, selfish young wife will see the light and turn back before it is too late.

(In tomorrow's Boston American another policewoman will tell more about the problems that confront them in their daily work.)

POLICEWOMAN McAULIFFE AND STORY SKETCHES

Pastor Urges Parents Read Policewoman Series

By REV. ANDREW H. MULNIX, Pastor Faneuil Congregational Church, Brighton.

Miss McAuliffe's articles should be read by every young man, every young woman, every father and mother and by every roadhouse keeper in the land. They should be filmed and given before the boys and girls in the schools. Sin rushes on with seven-leagued boots. Let knowledge keep a jump ahead.

Boys and girls come up over the hill of young manhood and young womanhood almost over night. Mystery and wonder surround them. They are dazed. Old temptations come in new forms. Their very openness disarms.

NEED A FRIEND.

"Have a little ride?" "Sure." Girls should be warned. The skipper knows the reefs on his course.

Young people need a friend in their father and mother. They need to know the truth about themselves. Few parents know the "under the surface" life of their children. Three-quarters of an iceberg are under the surface of the water. The biggest part of our life is under the surface line. The forces of the ages are hidden there. They never slumber. They never sleep.

"Have a little ride?" The boy and girl have never seen each other before. Then begins the fight not of the surface forces at all, but of those inherited, titanic forces within the hidden part of the mind of the boy and the hidden part of the mind of the girl. Rushing suddenly to the surface—they often carry everything before them.

SAFETY IN RELIGION.

Knowledge working within, as yeast works in dough, will help. Only in religion is there absolute safety. God in the mentality. The "under pow-

Premier Determines to Carry on Government Despite Advices to Resign

London, Dec. 10 (A.P.)—Prime Minister Baldwin had an audience with King George at Buckingham Palace shortly before noon after he had conferred with Sir Lanning Worthington-Evans, the Postmaster-General, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Ronald McNeill, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and B. M. Eyres-Monsell, the Chief Government Whip.

The Central News says "The purpose of Mr. Baldwin's visit was to give his majesty his views and intentions regarding the political situation following the general election. Mr. Baldwin did not tender his resignation and it is understood he will inform the Cabinet tomorrow that he is prepared to retain the reins of the government until Parliament meets next month."

According to the Daily Mail, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, First Lord of the Admiralty Amery, and Sir P. Lloyd Greame, President of the Board of Trade, strongly urged the Premier to resign immediately and advise the King to invite J. Ramsay MacDonald to form a cabinet, a course to which Mr. Baldwin was understood to have agreed.

The other Cabinet Ministers, learning of this, emphatically dissented, the Daily Mail asserts, and decided that if the Premier took such a course they would publicly dissociate themselves from it, their view being that the circumstances demand continuance of the Conservative government with a new Premier.

The Daily News and the Westminster Gazette, staunch supporters of Asquithan Liberalism, say that on no account will the Liberal party assent to any sort of Conservative-Liberal coalition.

REPUBLIC SENTINELS TO FIGHT "RADICALS"

Washington, Dec. 10.—Means of taking "concerted action by sound and loyal organizations against radical legislation" were considered today at a meeting of representatives of various patriotic societies called by the Central Owls of the Republic.

Speakers will include Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, Senator Wadsworth of New York, Senator King of Utah, former Senator Thomas of Colorado, Assistant Secretary Wadsworth of New York, Representative Hayne Hill, president of the National Association for Constitutional Government; Frank L. Peckham of the American Legion, and former Governor Percival W. Clement of Vermont.

FOREIGN SERVICE BILL UP WEDNESDAY

Washington, Dec. 10.—Hearings on the bill by Representative Rogers of Lowell to reorganize the foreign services will begin before the House Foreign Affairs Committee as soon as it is organized.

Chairman Porter is hopeful that the committee will be ready to function by Wednesday and has invited Secretary Hughes to appear as the first witness.

Mr. Rogers announced today that President Coolidge had written a letter to Mr. Hughes giving "explicit endorsement" to the bill.

the surface life controlled by the Infinite."

Says Lillian Gish in the "White Sister" to her lover, whom she thought dead, "No, I cannot go with you. I have given my word to God and only He can release me."

WHO FOUND TICKETS?

Who found the twelve complimentary tickets to the Charity Ball that were sent up in toy balloons from Boston Common? These tickets were confined in some 15c balloons and were released for the purpose of advertising the Ball. A man became interested in the ceremony and bought one of the balloons. He tied a card to the string, before releasing it, and wrote that he would give the finder a Christmas present, if communicated with.

Will the persons who found the balloons containing the tickets please communicate with the Christmas Fund director? He desires to know how far the balloons traveled. When last seen they were travelling rapidly inland in the general direction of Burlington, Vermont.

TWICE-REPEATED DREAM REVEALS DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Spring Lake, Mich., Dec. 10.—The dream, twice repeated, of George Snyder, a contractor, led to the discovery of the bodies of Harry B. Proctor, thirty-three, a Muskegon real estate dealer, and fourteen-year-old Edna Fullager, buried in the mud of Grand River, three blocks from the Proctor home here. The man and girl had been missing since October 30.

Snyder, sketched the place where the automobile in which the two were last seen might be found.

Proctor called at the Fullager home the night of October 30. He had sold a home to Mrs. Fullager. Proctor said he had been drinking and was afraid to drive his car, and the Fullager girl finally consented to drive him home. That was the last seen of them. A warrant charging abduction was obtained against Proctor.

WIFE 'BUTCHER' TWICE LISTED AS PARANOIAC

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 10.—E. Roy Tompkins, who yesterday confessed to cutting off his wife's head and hiding her body in the woods near here, showed little concern or worry over his act in his cell at the county jail here today.

The confessed murderer was twice declared to be a paranoic, police said, and District Attorney George A. Shaughnessy said he would ask the trial court to appoint a commission to inquire into the sanity of Tompkins.

Mrs. Tompkins disappeared from her home last Thursday, and her headless body was found near Don gan Bay, eleven miles from here, yesterday morning. Several hours later Tompkins confessed that he strangled his wife into unconsciousness, carried her body to the bathtub of their home, severed her head with a butcher knife and later took the body to Dorena Bay and buried it beneath a pile of stones and leaves.

EXPECT "EQUAL PAY" VICTORY

being "not for the benefit of the schools, but for the benefit of a certain grade of women teachers."

Joseph L. Powers of the Boston Latin School said the men would support an increase of the women's salary to $3,714, which male teachers now receive, whenever the city can pay the men a proportionate increase.

Richard P. Bonney, junior master of Dorchester High School, declared that women were driving men out of the schools. He said the school men must oppose an increase which, if granted, would either cut their own pay or else end all hopes of their ever securing for themselves a living wage.

Patrick F. Campbell, headmaster of Boston Latin School, said the matter should be left to the School Committee. The people should see to it, he said, that the School Committee adopts a salary schedule with a maximum large enough to attract the best men and women teachers and then increase their compensation wherever and whenever the individual shows himself or herself by attainment and service worthy of higher pay than the rank and file.

Women Excell Men As Teachers, Says Girl Pupil

The editor of the American received today the following letter from a pupil in the Girls' High School:

I have been reading your recent arguments for the great question, "Equal Pay for Women Teachers."

I wish that it were in my power to prove to some of these people who are against "Equal Pay," how much more efficient most of our women teachers are to some of the present men teachers.

I am a pupil in one of the Boston city high schools, and I know from experience with both men and women teachers that the women teachers are by far the best teachers and the harder workers. They do deserve, and should get more pay; and if I were of the voting age, I'd put one of the biggest X's that was ever made against the word "Yes."

You can visit the high schools, especially my own, any day at all, and ask the pupils whom they think teaches them more. (I mean teaches them so that they'll remember it for a long time), and I am positive the response will be "Women Teachers."

Hoping and praying that the women teachers will get what they have always deserved, I am,

HELEN V. CUMMINGS,
Girls' High School, 4th Year.

are regular—for regular trade in the regular season and were made by regular overcoat concerns early in the year. Everything possible was accordingly embodied in manufacture. The sinister influence of the January Mark Down or Price Cutting necessity could not operate at the time the Overcoats were made and to that extent prove their superiority today to any observing investigator.

The Empire of Opinion

When every day of one short week brings increasing numbers of persons to tell you unsolicited that clothes were sent in by earlier customers you know that "the good news travels as well as the bad." Sullivan's will not fail the senders-in. Sullivan's will not fail the "sent-in." It is hoped that you will continue to tell your friends how little you paid for your overcoat. Thus do the people form "The Empire of Opinion."

Quality Accentuation

Low Price, of course, is an incident, but it is principally and especially the quality of these Overcoats that is held up for your attention.

Let it be diamonds

Diamonds have been used for the ornamentation of scepters, scabbards, and robes of state for centuries.

In the Talmud we read of a gem supposed to be the diamond which was worn by the High Priest. The Hindus revered it. The Arabians attributed to it the power to bring good fortune.

But it was not until 1431 that the diamond was worn in jewelry. Then one Jacques Coeur, a merchant, introduced a new cutting of the diamond which greatly enhanced its lustre.

Agnes Sorel was the reigning beauty of the French court of Monsieur Coeur's day. She ruled fashions and manners. To her Coeur presented a girdle studded with diamonds cut in the new way.

The diamond from that day to this has been the favorite jewel of women the world over. In rings, earrings, bracelets, charms, pins and pendants, it heightens the effect of their costumes and brings delight to their hearts.

Let your Christmas gifts to those whom you hold dear be diamonds.

HUSBAND KEPT HER LOCKED IN, WIFE CHARGES

Fitchburg, Dec. 10.—Here are some of the abuses Mrs. Florence Cormier, twenty-three years old, of No. 39 Clarendon street, says she had to suffer at the hands of her husband, Benjamin Cormier, whom she is suing for divorce and who is under arrest for non-support of his wife and two small children.

"He locked me in the house nights so I could not see anyone, while he went out and had a good time with the boys.'

"On one occasion he drove me and my two children out of the house and while I was gone he tore up all my clothes. When I returned I had only the dress I wore.

"For many years I worked and turned my pay over to my husband, yet when I wanted money I was forced to beg it from him. He has never bought me any decent clothes. Though I was but fifteen when I married him, I began to look like a woman of fifty after a few years.

"When our first child came, he got worse and told me he had no use for either me or the child.

"He was very jealous and I could not even look at my relatives. At one time he did not allow me to speak to my mother for four months.

"If I protested against anything he did, he would beat me and my body would bear the bruises for days.

"He tried to get a divorce from me, charging me with unfaithfulness, but the case was dismissed because he had no proof of his charges."

The two Cormier children, Mrs. Cormier said, are now in Canada, being cared for by her mother. Mrs. Cormier, herself, is earning her own living by working in the plant of the Viscoloid Company in Leominster.

AWAIT CERTIFICATES OF OUSTED DOCTORS

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 10.—No additional certificates of doctors whose right to practice in Connecticut have been revoked by the State Department of Health were returned today as requested by the Commissioner of Health.

Mrs. Fred W. Works wrote from East Milton, Mass., that her husband's certificate had been given her with instructions that if a return of it was requested by the Department of Health she was to comply. Mrs. Works wrote that in the confusion of moving from Stonington, Ct., where her husband had his office, she had mislaid the certificate, but when found she would see that it was forwarded.

HAYNES ASKS PUBLIC TO BACK DRY LAW

New York, Dec. 10.—A plea for cooperation with the Federal government by State and municipal officials and the general public in the enforcement of prohibition law in New York, was made today by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes in addressing a citizenship conference.

"The Federal government," he said "should not be called upon to put on a police uniform and police your back yards. The little, frivolous, local violation should be handled by the local officials, and your local officials will listen to you if you have the courage to let your convictions and desires be known."

WARNS AGAINST 'CURES' IN AUTO POISONING

Dr. Eugene R. Kelley, State commissioner of Public Health, in a statement today calling attention to the increasing number of deaths by carbon monoxide poisoning due to running auto engines in garages without sufficient ventilation, warns against the use of chemical substances advertised to prevent or minimize the danger.

One of these substances recently put upon the market is being investigated by the food and drug division of his office.

"The Department of Public Health is unable to recommend any material which will be satisfactory for the complete absorption of carbon monoxide or any other dangerous gases," declares Dr. Kelley. "The only satisfactory method for the prevention of death from the inhalation of dangerous gases is adequate ventilation.

Joe's wigwam Winter times is No. 9 Bulfinch street. Summer times it is the great, broad places, the fairs and elsewhere.

Mary Elizabeth loves Mr. and Mrs. Little Bear. She likes their Bulfinch street home. She likes their tent at the fairs all the way from Brockton to Allentown, Pa., during the Fall.

But her mother, Mrs. Mary Vicaire, came all the way to Boston from New Brunswick, to break up the arrangement for the Little Bears to keep her six-year-old daughter.

Judge Dolan ruled that the mother is an improper person to have control of the daughter.

It is claimed that when two years old Mary Elizabeth was given to Mrs. Mary McCormack of Wilmington, with the sum of $25, by her sister, Mrs. Mary E. Woodman, No. 627 Paris street, East Boston.

The fight for little Mary Elizabeth has been between the Little-Bears and Mrs. McCormack. Mary Elizabeth has been shunted around.

Now she is a part of the Little Bear wigwam.

ELOPING HUSBAND PUT ON PROBATION

George H. Tustin of No. 17 London street, Somerville, father of two children, was placed on probation by Judge Sturtevant today, on condition Tustin pay $10 a week for the support of his wife. Tustin eloped a week ago with Mrs. Joseph Ford, of No. 139 Spring street, Cambridge, mother of four children.

"Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, December 8th, on shipments sold out, ranged from 4.00 cents to 19.50 cents per 100 and averaged 12.34 cents per pound."—Advt.

Society Folk Planning Trips to the West Coast, Says Betty Alden

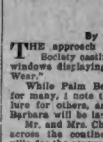
By BETTY ALDEN.

THE approach of the New Year finds Dame Society casting an interested eye in the shop windows displaying enticing signs, "For Southern Wear."

While Palm Beach is a gay stamping-ground for many, I note that California is an irresistible lure for others, and the Boston colony at Santa Barbara will be larger than it ever was.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester W. Bliss, who are starting across the continent this month, have taken a villa for the season at Santa Barbara. Last Winter the Blisses had a house together with Mr. Bliss's sister, Mrs. Hamilton Perkins, who has herself taken a house there for the Winter.

A little later in the month Mrs. Perkins' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Greenough 2nd of Brookline are crossing the continent to make a visit. The Greenough's two little boys, "Hammy" and Pelham, are both pending the cold months with their grandmother.



Mrs. Greenough.

Other prominent members of the Boston contingent at Santa Barbara will be Mr. and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine of Arlington street and Waltham.

MR. AND MRS. ANDREW CARNEGIE 2ND and their younger daughter, Miss Lucy Carnegie, are coming up to town this week from "Seawold," their Manchester-by-the-Sea estate.

The family will be for a while at the Copley-Plaza before going South to their home on Cumberland Island, off the Florida coast. The older daughter will join her parents here this week, when she will return from a three months' trip abroad.

Miss Lucy Carnegie, one of the prominent buds of last season, recently became engaged to Phineas Shaw Sprague, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague of Commonwealth avenue.

Mrs. McCagg.

MISS ELEANORA WINSLOW of Chestnut street recently returned from New York to see how "Baby's" baby was getting along.

"Baby" is the youngest daughter of the George S. Winslows, and before her marriage to young Louis McCagg, Jr., a year ago last June, she was more formally known as Katherine Winslow.

Now "Baby" Winslow McCagg is the mother of a lovely little daughter just five months old. When the newcomer was christened I recall that Mrs. David Sears, 2d (Nell White), and Miss Anna Winslow went down to Newport for the all-important event. The former Katherine Winslow, with her blue eyes and red-gold hair, made a very demure-looking bride at the ceremonial in St. Paul's Cathedral which transformed her into Mrs. Louis McCagg, Jr. Since their marriage the young people have been making their home in New York.

OFFICIAL: MOTHERS-IN-LAW TO BLAME—IT IS NO JOKE

New York, Dec. 10.—Mothers-in-law break up more homes than any other influence in present day American life, officials of the legal aid society today asserted. The traditional mother-in-law joke, they said, was fully justified by the records of the organization's forty-seven years of service to New York's poor.

"Mothers-in-law are responsible for most of the thousands of domestic difficulty cases which have come to the legal aid society in recent years," Leonard McGee, attorney for the society, said. "There are three reasons: No mother thinks any other woman's child is good enough for her own; second, a mother frequently sees in the marriage of her child the thwarting of her own plans and ambitions; and, third, where the boy or girl has been a wage-earner, the mother dislikes sharing her accustomed income with another."

FILES BILL TO DEPORT ALIEN BOOTLEGGERS

Washington, Dec. 10.—Deportation of aliens convicted of violating the prohibition laws, narcotics laws, the white slave act and felonies or crimes involving moral turpitude, is proposed in a bill introduced today by Representative Watkins, Democrat, Oregon.

DENBY DEMANDS ELEVATION OF NAVY GUNS

Washington, Dec. 10.—A sweeping program for modernization of the American navy, including the elevation of guns on battleships to increase their firing range, was recommended today by Secretary of the Navy Denby, in his annual report to Congress.

"In the opinion of the Navy Department," Secretary Denby declared, "the elevation of the guns will not in any way contravene the spirit or letter of treaty for the limitation of naval armament."

This opinion is contrary to that of Secretary of State Hughes and of the late President Harding, who ordered a halt in the existing program as a result of a disagreement with Great Britain.

Explaining his position, Denby said:

"In a fleet action we would have seven ships that can fire slightly over 20,000 yards, whereas the ships of shortest range in the British fleet can fire 23,100 yards, making a difference of practically two miles.

Denby recommended that sufficient funds be appropriated for a complete modernization of the battleships of the navy, consisting of the following projects:

1.—Deck sheeting, as an additional defense against air attack.

2.—Torpedo blisters, as additional defence against submarines.

3.—Conversion of six coal-burning battleships to oil burning.

Estimated cost is $30,000,000.

Denby asked funds for construction of eight 10,000-ton cruisers, three submarines of the cruiser type and six swift, light-draft gunboats for river patrol work.

He pointed with pride to the accomplishments of the Naval Air Service.

"Out of forty-two recognized world's records for aircraft performance the U. S. Navy holds twenty," he reported.

BLAZE DESTROYS XMAS TOYS IN STOREHOUSE

Many children throughout New England will have their Christmas toys delayed as the result of a blaze in the storeroom on the top floor of the four story granite structure occupied by the Northern Commission Company, dealers in toys and novelties, at No. 196-202 Devonshire street, in the business district, today.

Delay in an emergency fire call put through over the telephone by girl employes of the concern and a locked automobile parked near the fire hydrant directly in front of the building hampered the fire fighters.

The blaze spread rapidly through the inflammable novelties and toys, causing considerable smoke.

The fire was discovered by Joseph Busby, a parcel post mail clerk of No. 9 True street, Everett, who was at work on the top floor. Busby smelled smoke, and, looking around saw flames ascending from one of the packing cases.

Rushing down stairs, he notified Manuel T. Perry, the manager, and John McLean. He then rushed back with an extinguisher and fought the blaze until the arrival of the firemen. Manager Perry gathered up the order books and placed them in the safe and then fought the blaze.

When the fire fighters arrived they found a small automobile parked directly at the entrance to the building near the fire hydrant. The wheels of the machine had been locked and it was with considerable difficulty that they were able to move the machine away.

Most of the damage was to the holiday goods.

Water damaged the stock of L. E. Muran Co., stationers and printers, on the first floor.

The building is owned by the Slocum estate.

Crossed wires is believed to be the cause of the fire.

REP. KELLY DEMANDS BAN ON 'RUM' MEDICINE SALES

Rep. Coleman E. Kelly of Dorchester has filed a petition in the House classing certain patent medicines as beverages and forbidding of the medicines except on written prescription of a physician.

Since prohibition says many persons have turned to such patent medicines as can be purchased free of drug stores. He says they contain fourteen to thirty-five per cent. alcohol and that a law should be adopted prohibiting the sale of any patent medicine containing more than six per cent. alcohol. He particularly mentions bitters, sarsaparilla and celery compounds.

The complete home

NOT of the future, but today. The soft temperate warmth of June will greet you as you enter, no matter how biting and cold the day outside.

In the cellar is a gas-fired automatically controlled boiler, which requires no attention from the beginning till the end of winter. No coal to handle, no ashes to carry out, no dirt or dust, no bother.

The kitchen contains a cabinet gas range, built with all burners and ovens waist high and with a heat control device which takes the guess work out of cooking.

And of course hot water is provided by an instantaneous gas water heater the year round, an essential to health and comfort.

For cold fall days before the central heating plant is started or for that matter, on cold rainy summer days there is a gas Radiantfire—the sunniest fire place of all.

THE TRUTH ABOUT EQUAL PAY

In the closing hour of the wonderful campaign for a great economic principle that has been waged by the women teachers in the Boston Schools, it seems proper to fix clearly and truthfully in the public mind, three points.

FIRST—As to the cost to make the "Equal Pay" act effective according to the best legal interpretation.

The following statement is from the Boston office of Samuel H. Mildram, former member of the Legislature from Dorchester and everywhere accepted as leading authority on municipal accountancy and finance.

141 Milk St., Boston, Dec. 7, 1923.

Miss Helen F. Keefe:—

Following out your instructions relative to the acceptance of the "Equal Pay Act" by the people of Boston at the City Election, I have made a careful survey of the salary schedule of the High Schools of Boston, working from the latest available public document No. 82—1923.

On the assumption that all the women now in the High Schools who are performing the same grade and kind of service as men teachers will be advanced to the equivalent men's salary, I find that the total cost for the first year to make such schedule effective will be $197,736. This cost includes the advance of 26 "Heads of Departments" affects a total of 307 women teachers. If every woman in the service should remain the ten years required to reach the "maximum," the difference in cost will be only $34,052 more than the attached estimate.

Respectfully submitted,
SAMUEL H. MILDRAM.
Consulting Engineer and Accountant.

Kindly compare this sane and exact estimate of $197,736 with those from other sources issued merely for the purpose of defeating "Equal Pay."

Boston's highly trained Budget Commissioner can easily appropriate $197,736 from his annual budget of over $48,000,000, without changing the tax rate.

SECOND—As to a possible effect on the Boys' High Schools—please read this authorized statement from a man who truly loves the schools of our city.

"I am a graduate of the Boys' Latin School, a former man teacher in Boston and a present member of the Boston School Committee. I feel that the acceptance of the Equal Pay act by the people of Boston will be of great benefit to the entire School Service. IT WILL NOT AFFECT THE BOYS' HIGH SCHOOLS OR THEIR MEN TEACHERS. It will wipe out an injustice to our women teachers. Why should anyone vote against it?

WILLIAM G. O'HARE

THIRD—As to the TRUTH of all statements made in this campaign.

CITIZENS OF BOSTON!

The women in the Boston Schools have made a campaign of TRUTH. We feel that any cause worthy of public support must be maintained in TRUTH, the WHOLE TRUTH and NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH, regardless of any attacks made upon it.

In TRUTH, we have waged our campaign. The final power that can wipe out inequality, promote justice and establish fairness is in the hands of the voters of Boston.

May you exercise that great constitutional power, tomorrow, with "fairness" and vote "Yes" on "Equal Pay for Equal Service."

IROQUOIS CHIEF DEMANDS FULL NATIONHOOD

Paris, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—Deskaheh, chief of the Six Nations, who dwell on the Canadian shores of Lake Erie, gave a touch of the picturesque to today's inaugural meeting of the council of the League of Nations here.

While the council was discussing the agenda in private session the Iroquois chieftain was pacing the corridors outside giving voice to the grievances of the Indians against England and Canada.

Supported by his lawyer, H. T. Scott Huntington of Seattle, he complained that the council at its September session in Geneva failed to grant due considerations to his petition that the Six Nations confederacy be recognised as a sovereign people by virtue of a treaty with King George III.

Deskaheh declared he would never abandon the battle for recognition of his people's independence, and would come daily to the council sessions until the grievance of the Indians had been taken up officially. He has a new petition asking that the council appoint a commission to investigate the evidence with the object of ascertaining whether it justifies the assembly of the league recognizing the applicant as a sovereign state.

FROM OFFICE BOY TO VICE PRESIDENT

Twenty-two years of diligent attention to business, starting when sixteen years old, has brought George C. MacDonald from an office boy to the post of vice-president and general manager of the Johnson Educator Food Company, together with a partnership in this large corporation in the biscuit world along with E. Fred Cullen, president.

Mr. MacDonald has a long record of achievement. Some of the milestones in his successful advance being his posts with the National Biscuit Company, rising to general manager of the New England Country Sales Department, and later with the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, where he became general manager of that concern.

RELIGION NEEDED, SAYS D. T. O'CONNELL

Daniel T. O'Connell, assistant district attorney of Suffolk County, emphasized the need of religion to stamp out crime, in an address before the members of the North Quincy Council, K. of C., at a communion breakfast held in Music Hall, Atlantic.

"The criminal law needs the assistance of religion," said O'Connell. "It those who stand accused of offence against the criminal laws had been obedient to the laws of God, there never would have been occasion for charging them with crime."

DYING WIFE SOBS FOR ELOPING MATE

New York, Dec. 10.—Harry J. Reidy, former bodyguard for State officials, who vanished with, it is alleged, $60,000 obtained from a wife he married secretly despite the fact that he had a wife and ten children, in Dorchester, Mass., did not call for Ireland with his "love booty."

Instead of leaving this country on the Adriatic, as was reported, Reidy merely created the impression he would do so, and then remained in New York. Police are seeking him.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Katherine O'Connell Reidy, the second wife, in Martinsburg, W. Va., nursed an aching heart and endeavored to rebuild her millinery business to the prosperity it once held. Telegraphic inquiry as to his first wife at Dorchester, brought the following:

"She is dying, and the doctors hold out no hope for her. She does not know of her husband's duplicity and is calling for him constantly."

HIGHER PAY FOR P. O. EMPLOYES

Boston postal employes are elated over news from Washington that an omnibus bill to cover all groups with provisions for increased wages is to be introduced in Congress this week.

A telegram stating this fact, signed by Thomas J. Flaherty, secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Postoffice Clerks, was read at a meeting of Boston Local 100 by President John A. Kelley.

The message stated that the increases in pay looked good for various postal groups and that Congress appeared to favor it. It is stated by local postal employes to be the first official notice of hope for the raises which they have been seeking for years.

President Kelley said he attributed impairment in efficiency to inadequate salaries, causing a constant turnover in the personnel.

Faster than the Wind!

by the Veteran Motorist

LAST winter I was up in the Adirondack Mountains, and dropped over to see the skating races at Saranac Lake, and for the first time in my life, I saw some of the champions show their skating tricks.

Some tricks, I say! And while I am no speed demon when it comes to driving a car, if I ever take up skating, I hope that I will be able to show just a little of the speed that those boys exhibited on the ice. They were literally "faster than the wind" as they came lunging and racing down the home stretch.

But there was plenty of excitement, too, at the start, as they scrambled for the lead, until finally one shot ahead and the real race was on.

Come to think of it, taking a big car or a heavy truck through city traffic, out of town to the free country roads, and over the long hills to its destination, is a real race of itself.

Like skating, you must be quick on the get-away, fast in the open stretches, with plenty of reserve power and stamina, to finish on time and ahead of the next fellow.

YOUTH STRANGLED BY NURSE, DECLARES FATHER OF VICTIM

Catskill, N. Y., Dec. 10.—The campaign of insinuations intimating that Anna Sobin, seventeen-year-old nurse, strangled Howard Rothenberg, seven-year-old Newark boy at Windham last August, came to a head today when Charles Rothenberg, the boy's father, declared he would "accuse Anna Sobin of the murder."

Rothenberg said he had gathered new evidence against the girl, who, District Attorney Charles G. Coffin declares, is innocent.

"Anna did not use safety pins in her stockings," Rothenberg said. "This proves she used garters. You will see of what significance this is later

Coffin has worked on the theory that another person killed the boy "to shut his mouth" on the parties and automobile joy rides of the residents of the fashionable Summer colony at Windham.

MUSSOLINI APPEALS TO ITALY; DECIDES ON NEW ELECTION

Rome, Dec. 10 (A.P.).—A decree closing the present parliamentary session has been signed by King Victor Emmanuel, it was officially announced today.

The dissolution of the chamber is expected early next year.

The Messaggero says Premier Mussolini decided upon the dissolution so as to appeal to the country, the elections for a new Chamber of Deputies to be held in the Spring.

It is believed Premier Mussolini could obtain without difficulty from the Chamber the full authority he desired. The semi-official Stefani agency says, however: "Premier Mussolini probably considered it beneath his dignity to accept full authority from an assembly which did not enjoy the confidence of the nation."

THREATS PREVENT NEGROES FROM RETURNING TO SOUTH

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Special trains which were to have carried 500 families of negroes to Mississippi, were cancelled when the negroes were told by unidentified agitators that contentment and punishment awaited them on their return.

Officials of the Illinois Central Railroad said that a representative of a group of Southern cotton growers' associations had been in Chicago and procured about 500 negro families to go to the Mississippi cotton fields.

This man, it was said, was threatened with violence if he did not desist in his efforts to take the negroes South. He was ordered to leave the city

ARREST DUE TO KLAN PLOT, ILLINOIS OFFICIAL CHARGES

Johnson, Ill., Dec. 10.—Sheriff Kearney Charles Jones of Robinson, Ill., held under charge of violating the Volstead Act, said today his arrest was the result of activities of the Ku Klux Klan. He asserted that the affidavit sworn to by Henry Plant, a negro and confessed bootlegger, which accused Jones of receiving protection money, was obtained after the negro was intimidated by Klan members.

Jones said he had opposed the appointment of a klansman. He said he had turned into the school fund sum greater than his salary through his prosecution of bootleggers.

MANY LEADERS ARRESTED IN GREEK ROYALIST PLOT

Athens, Dec. 10 (I.N.S.).—Numerous arrests were made today, including a former Deputy, a retired General, other army officers and civilians, in connection with an alleged plot which was to have the co-operation of communists. Royalists were said to be involved.

Previously it had been reported that certain Royalists had joined a conspiracy to hinder the forthcoming general election and to precipitate disorders that might bring about foreign intervention.

WAR PRISONERS FREE BY XMAS, DECLARES BERGER

Washington, Dec. 10.—Representative Berger, Socialist, Wisconsin, after a conference with President Coolidge, said he had reasons to believe that all of the thirty-two imprisoned violators of war laws would be granted amnesty before Christmas by the President

President Coolidge this week will receive from the Department of Justice the report of a committee of three which he designated a month ago to inquire into the general question of release of war law violators.

COOLIDGE TO GIVE JOHNSON BATTLE IN CALIFORNIA

Washington, Dec. 10.—President Coolidge not only has definitely entered the race for the Republican Presidential nomination next year, but his friends are preparing to put his name on the primary ballot in California, home state of Senator Hiram Johnson.

This was indicated today after a call at the White House by William H. Crocker, Republican national committeeman from California, and for years a member of the anti-Johnson Republican faction of that state.

COOLIDGE BACKS BIG AIR FLEET

Emphasizes, in Special Message, the Need of Keeping Abreast of Other Nations

Washington, Dec. 10.—Emphasis is laid by President Coolidge on the importance "of providing for continued development of military and naval aviation if America is to keep abreast of other nations" in a special communication to Congress today transmitting the annual report of the national advisory committee for aeronautics.

The President said he concurred in the committee's recommendations for continued scientific research work for aviation and establishment of a bureau of civil aeronautics in the Department of Commerce.

The committee's report, signed by Joseph S. Ames, chief of the executive committee, said that while the military air services were not so large as those of other powers, "we are gradually forging ahead of other nations in our knowledge of the scientific principles underlying the design and construction of aircraft."

A plea for continuation of this research work as "the best insurance obtainable to prevent waste of time in construction programs was coupled with the summary of what had already been accomplished. Assurances of "reliable service at reasonable cost" was to be the foundation for commercial development of aviation, the report added and progress in this direction must be gradual.

"The present high cost factor, combined with the absence of improved national airways, constitutes an economic barrier to the general application of aviation to commercial purposes," he report said.

Greater government encouragement of commercial aviation is necessary, the committee declared, adding that "the present ten-year aircraft building program of the army air service and the five-year program of the navy, will, if carried out, meet the absolute needs of the two services, and possibly serve to keep in existence the nucleus of an industry until a strong, self-supporting commercial aircraft industry."

FRESHIES OUTWIT WELLESLEY SOPHS

The freshmen at Wellesley college "put one over" on the sophomores today.

It happened in the new Pater Noster Church. The "freshies," departing from the conventional, held their election at 8 this morning, fooling the "sophs." Miss Mary Borwick, of Bronxville, N. Y., was chosen president for the term, and Miss Nancy Southworth of Syracuse, secretary. Other officers will be elected later.

Leads Them All

NORMAN W. SCHUR

NORTH END BOY OF 15 HIGHEST AT HARVARD

Norman W. Schur, no relation to "the Cabots, Rockefellers, Lodges or Winthrops, North End lad, won the honor of attaining highest grades in tests for entrance for Harvard. He was one of 1,139 who sought the honor.

He was fifteen years of age. He lived in a dingy tenement at No. 84 Salem street. He may have had a few tremors when he slammed the front door, stepped out on the sidewalk and started to match his wits with those of the most aristocratic boys of New England and the rest of the world.

The papers were filed. Then the professors got at them. When they had gotten through with them they found that the Salem street lad of humble parentage topped them all. He celebrated his sixteenth birthday on October 7.

Since that time the family has moved to No. 83 Atlantic avenue, Beachmont. But Norman is pooling in a Harvard dormitory and is going to try for the crew.

RENTS AT DIME PER EVENING

Couples Get Comforts of Home Unchaperoned at Cottage in Woods

Wellesley has a community love nest.

Cranberry Cottage, its users call it.

For ten cents a couple can move in for an evening. Absolute privacy is guaranteed.

Take Grove street out of Wellesley square up almost to the Needham line. Enter the woods at the culvert, turn to your left, and keep on going. A five minute walk will bring you to Cranberry Cottage.

In the pantry are sugar, coffee, condensed milk and crackers. Sweethearts bring their own meat and vegetables and cook a meal, for the place is stocked with stoves—floor, lard, spices and preserves.

COMFORTS OF HOME.

Cheery fire may be built in the little old-fashioned stove in the living room. The place is comfortably and prettily furnished. There are dainty muslin curtains in the windows, new magazines on the tables, and classics in the book case.

All for a dime.

Probably nowhere in all the world is there another such cottage. Nobody knows who maintains it.

It nestles among the pines, deep in the woods of Wellesley.

To reach it one must climb one hill and tumble down another; then take a wooded path, where brambles so make the place partially impassable, and wander through a clearing. Another bit of forest—and, suddenly out from the pines, stands the little house.

RHYME ASKS DIME.

Some small attempt has been made to porting. On an antique gate leg table is a mite box, and on it is pasted this little rhyme:

"Whoever thou art who entereth here

You're sure to find naught else but cheer,

So to show you've had a pleasant time,

Into this box just drop a dime.

There are many things we would like to do

To make the Cottage attractive to you,

You may make this possible if now and then

You drop a here your little ten."

In the box, when a curious reporter opened it, were six dimes—not enough to pay for a third of the groceries in the kitchen pantry.

The love nest then must be supported by some philanthropic soul, whose idea in placing the contribution box is only to instill some notion of reciprocity.

Upstairs there are two big bedrooms, with two cots. There is no bed linen, but plenty of soft, fluffy blankets and feather pillows.

In the kitchen is a range and two oil stoves, pots and pans and a set of dishes. It would be a simple matter to prepare dinner there and to serve it in the cozy living room.

Inquiry failed to reveal who owns the place, or how long it has been there. Townspeople, when told of the existence of the love nest, laughed and refused to believe there is such a place.

USERS TAKE TURNS.

It seems probable that sweethearts take turns for possession of the place. If lights are burning when one couple arrive, that means the house is already tenanted for the evening, and the second couple go away.

Most likely larger parties go there occasionally for dinner, and to spend the evening. There is a ouija board, a card table, poker chips and checkers.

A card tacked above the stove reads, "Welcome to Cranberry Cottage. Have a good time, and leave things as you find them."

Wellesley College girls are said to frequent the cottage with their sweethearts. Mrs. Browning's verse and a copy of John Ruskin's "Sesame and Lilies" imparted something of an intellectual air to the living room, but Cranberry Cottage tells no tales, and if students go there, there's no proving it.

WILLETT SAYS HE WASN'T TOLD ABOUT PROFITS

The sixth week of the suit of George F. Willett against Robert F. Herrick and others opened today at Windham court with Willett on the stand for his seventeenth appearance.

Most of his examination today by his counsel, Sherman L. Whipple, bore on a letter written by F. H. Fessenden, one of the defendants, to the Girard National Bank of Philadelphia.

In this letter, dated Feb. 18, 1919 the writer said both the American Felt Company and the Twin F. Green Felt Company showed good business improvement since the previous July when the management of the companies was turned over to Fessenden, Robert F. Herrick and Robert Winsor of Kidder, Peabody & Company, in consideration of a $5,000,000 loan to Willett, Sears & Company.

The witness said he was not informed of the improvement in the companies. Neither was he informed, he testified, that the American Felt Company showed assets of $300,000, which the letter also stated.

The writer of the letter invited the Girard National Bank to take part in a loan of $2,500,000, which it was stated was needed to keep the companies going. This was in addition to a $2,000,000 loan arranged in July.

The letter said all of the $5,000,000 had been taken care of except $725,000 owed by the American Felt Company.

It was also brought out that on Feb. 15, 1919, Fessenden wrote to Eugene V. R. Thayer, president of the Chase National Bank of New York, asking him to urge the Girard National Bank to get in on the new money proposition and extend their note

The letter added the arrangement was for one per cent. commission and 6 per cent. interest. Willett testified he was told the commission on the $3,000,000 loan was 13 per cent.

STARTS VOTE ON WAR MOVE IN SENATE

Washington, Dec. 10.—A campaign to prevent the United States government declaring war upon any foreign nation without first submitting the proposal to a vote of the people was launched in Congress today by Senator B. F. Ladd, Republican of North Dakota. Ladd introduced a resolution in the senate to this effect.

FORMER BOSTON SOCIETY GIRL QUITS HUSBAND

Boston society was interested today in cable dispatches from Paris announcing that Dorothy May Jordan Robinson, daughter of Mrs. and the late Eben Jordan, had been granted a separation in the French capital from Monroe Douglas Robinson.

Mr. Robinson is son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, and nephew of the late President Roosevelt. He is a clubman and a Harvard graduate.

They were married in Trinity Church, Boston, February 12, 1914 and after their honeymoon, established their domicile at No. 960 Park avenue, New York, where Mr. Robinson still resides.

As a debutante Mrs. Robinson had been hailed as one of the greatest classic dancers in the social amateur ranks of America, it being said she could execute movements accomplished only by the most proficient of professional ballerinas.

She made a sensation as the premiere danseuse of the Blue Bird ball at the famous Blue Bird ball given under the sponsorship of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in December 1919.

FIRE DAMAGE FOR MONTH IS $140,140

Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, in a report to Mayor Curley today on the activities of the fire department, stated that the fire fighting force responded to 161 alarms during the past month. The total loss was $140,140. This is a marked reduction both in alarms and damages over the same month a year ago.

HOW TO BUILD AND MOUNT SUPERNEUTRODYNE TRANSFORMERS

MUCH EASIER TO MAKE THAN IT MAY APPEAR

This is the fifth in the new series on the Superneutrodyne family. The "Baby Super," a radio-frequency and tuning unit for use with your old regenerative sets, has just been completed. Tomorrow we start the "Super Detector," consisting of the Superneutrodyne detector on one panel for use with your old two-stage amplifier. The article today removes the construction of the radio-frequency transformers

By M. A. SIMMONS,
Inventor of the Superneutrodyne.
(Copyright, 1923; Registered U. S. Patent Office; Reproduction Prohibited.)

There are two transformers in the Super, one ahead and one after the radio-frequency amplifying tube. The one ahead is perhaps more properly a tuning transformer, to couple the set with the antenna; the other a radio-frequency amplifying transformer. Their construction is the same.

Before getting into the technicalities, it is well to outline the idea of these transformers. The primary circuit of the first transformer is the antenna circuit, and is of the "untuned type." Theoretically this untuning, or non-resonant tuned primary drags down out of the ether waves of any frequency, within broad limits. And in the Super, the limits are the broadcast wave limits.

Tuning is accomplished by means of the condenser shunted across the secondary. And when the secondary is tuned, it accepts from the primary only that frequency to which the condenser tunes the secondary. Another effect then occurs. The coupling between primary and secondary and the primary sets up a resonance in the untuned primary at the same frequency as the secondary, causing it to exclude from the antenna circuit other frequencies.

This description, of course, is not scientifically exact. But it sounds good, and it is exact enough to give you a general idea of the Super-2 transformer. This untuned primary scheme is continued into the second, or radio frequency, transformer—that between the first tube and the detector tube.

The addition of another transformer and tube would add so little to the range of the set and the intensity of the received signal at radio-frequency that it would decrease the general efficiency, by adding to the expense of construction and maintenance out of all proportion to its actual value.

There is no restriction on your experimenting, however. Try out another transformer if you wish, in place of a third Simmons transformer, try one of the factory built R. F. transformers. If you do experiment, let us know your results to see if they correspond with ours.

Now to get down to cases, buy four lengths of tubing each 2¾ inches long. Two of the tubes should be three inches outside diameter, and two of them 2½ inches outside diameter.

POPULARITY PROVEN.

Since the introduction of the Superneutrodyne it has been difficult to get this tubing in hard rubber, or in the phenolithic compositions such as bakelite and condensite. That alone proves how popular has become the Superneutrodyne among the enthusiasts who want distance and volume, without the squeal.

If you find it impossible to get these materials, don't pass up construction. Try paper tubing. Not so very many years ago, before bakelite had been invented, we used to wind coils on cardboard, and got results. When the Quaker Oats people first adopted their round package it must have jumped the consumption of rolled oats remarkably in families where "Junior was fooling away his time on that wireless stuff."

Prepared cardboard tubing will do for the Simmons transformers, although bakelite or hard rubber is preferred. If you do the "preparing," use electrical varnish, not shellac, in preference to wax, and dry out the varnish in a gentle heat, maybe in the family oven, with the gas burner turned down low, and with frequent inspection to prevent scorching.

GET OUT TEMPLATE.

While the baking process is going on, get out your template for the transformer mountings.

This may be any hard material from bakelite to wood, but can be exact any outside dimensions larger than four by one and a half inches. In the center describe with a center mark. Through this scribe a line the length of the template.

Now measure on the back and plate. See how easy it is? Put rare plate of your condenser the distance from the centers of the countersunk screws that fasten the stationary plates together. You will find four holes, two fastening screws and two for the moving plates. Pick out that pair that pass through the ends of the fixed plates and that the distance you measure is a line parallel with the straight edges of the fixed condenser plates and, or nearly through, the rotor shaft. And for the luvamike, be accurate.

Halve this distance. The result measures the distance each side of the center line of the template, at which you pickpunch two more drill hole centers.

THE NO. 20 DRILL.

Drill these holes now with a No 20 drill, the idea being to fasten the finished template to the condenser back by the condenser nuts, which you will use for the holes for the screws by which you mount the transformers on the condenser. In this diagram this distance is set at one and nine sixteenths, but this is to be disregarded. Use your own measurements.

Before fastening on the template, you have two more holes to center and drill. These should be spaced, one at each side of the center of the template, each at one and one-sixth inches from the first center mark. Drill these out with a No. 32 drill The template is now all finished except for the hole in the center.

In the drawing, however, this is shown as a one-inch hole. Unless you have a lathe or a gadget for milling out big diameter holes, the center place might well be roughed out by drilling a series of small nearly adjoining holes along the circumference of the one-inch circle, completing the cutting with a small rat tail bowl or a jeweler's saw. It needn't be even or exact, and it must be large enough to pass the rotor shaft and bearing, with room to spare, because the rotor shaft on most condensers is not centered in the line joining those two fastening screws we located so carefully a few paragraphs back.

CLAMP THE TEMPLATE.

Now clamp the template on the back of the condenser. Drill the back end plate of the condenser with a No. 32 drill, passing the drill through the holes already made in the template. Remove these template holes, and they automatically space, line and center the holes in the condenser. Now take off the template, and replace the nut so screws on the condenser the way it was when you bought it. Tap the new holes in the condenser end plate with a 6x32 tap.

Now with the No. 32 drill point and the template mark the corresponding holes on the tubing. Don't drill with the No 32 drill, just start he holes—the actual drilling is done with a No. 27 drill. Care must be used here because these holes are close to the edge of the tubing, and may pull out the material if not properly located and drilled "wishy."

It might be safer for the novice mechanic to buy his tubing "mstbe" a quarter-inch longer than specifications. But there is just room enough, if reasonable care is used. And the nearer the edge these holes are, the easier they are to adjust in the assembly.

WIND THE WIRE.

On each of the smaller tubes wind two and three-quarters turns of No. 22 single covered silk wire, spaced one-eighth inch. Anchor the ends of he primary by passing into the tube through small holes, out again through holes, and back to the inside of the tubing. That is at each end of the primary wiring you drill three small holes, say with a No. 55 drill, and weave the wire through these, to hold the turns in place. Twisting out the leads on the inside of the tubing. The primary turns are at the upper end of the tube.

The secondary winding is seventy three turns, interwound in the same way as the primary, but with the leads brought outside the tubing.

Of course, these windings are in the same direction on primary and secondary

Now to mount the transformers Place the secondary outside the primary, with the No. 22 holes in line. From inside the primary pass through the holes brass, round head, machine screws, one and one-quarter inches long, 6x32 thread, with enough No. 6 washers between the primary and secondary to space them concentrically, the number washers depending on the thickness of the tubing

TUBE SPACING.

Slipp over each screw a piece of brass tubing five-sixteenths of an inch long. This spaces the transformer away from the back of the condenser. Now fasten each transformer to the condenser, by screwing the coupler screws into those holes you have already tapped in the condenser end plate to take them. You can see now the advantage of having these screws at the very edge of the tubing

Now connect the secondary leads to the condenser, the upper lead to the rotor binding post, the lower to the stator binding post. This stator lead, you know, is the grid lead

The finished condenser-transformer unit tilts at an angle of 55 degrees with the horizontal, with the upper end of the coils tilted back toward the detector tube. Now you can spot on your panel the condenser mounting screwholes so as to get this 55 degree tilt.

And there you have it. A lot easier to do than tell how to do.

Tomorrow we start the Superdetector, alias "Super-Dick."

Wait for the American's drawings—don't fail for those photo by blue prints these "radio-blueprints" are trying to sell. And don't blame us if the set won't work with transformers not made a la Simmons.

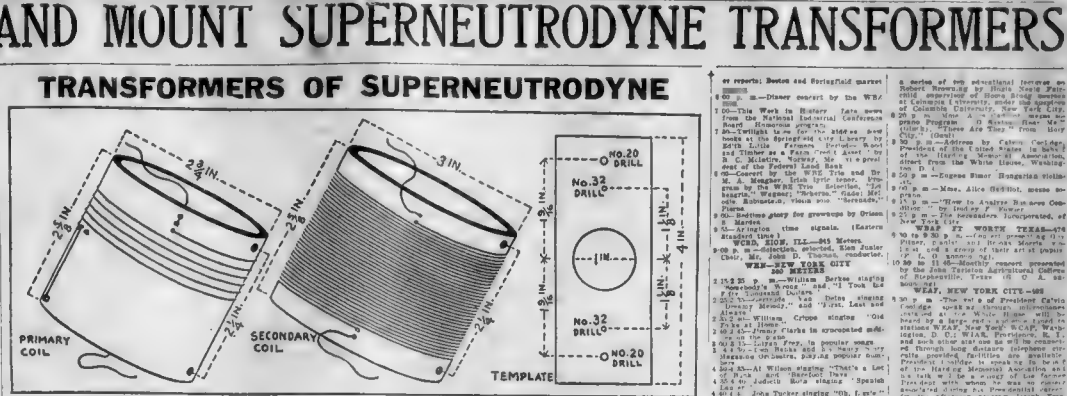
TRANSFORMERS OF SUPERNEUTRODYNE



(Copyright, 1923, Registered U. S. Patent Office; Reproduction Prohibited.)

Each transformer—there are two—consists of two windings—the inner, or primary, with 5¾ turns on tubing 2 3-4 inches outside diameter by 2 5-8 inches long; the outer winding, or secondary, with 73 turns on tubing 3 inches outside diameter by 2 5-8 inches long. No 22 single silk covered wire is used in both primary and secondary. At the right is shown the shape of the template used for spotting mounting screw holes in primary and secondary and in the back plate of the condenser.

PAUL DOYLE AND VIC HIRSH ARE READY FOR RING TEST HERE

WILSON AND McCARTHY BUSY TRAINING

By JACK CONWAY.

Paul Doyle, who started his drive for ring fame from Boston, will return to the scene of his many triumphs when he battles Vic Hirsh of Chicago in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

Doyle fought some of his most thrilling ring engagements in this city. Nate Siegal, Eddie Shevlin, Dave Shade, K. O. Loughran and many other illustrious Sons of Swat felt the sting of his right hand wallop.

Paul Doyle.

Doyle returns to Boston rated as one of the leading welterweights in this country. Chairman William Muldoon of the New York Boxing Commission recently declared that Doyle, Shade and Jimmy Jones were the leading contenders for a tussle with Mickey Walker.

The latter was informed that he would be obliged to risk his title in a meeting with one of these men before he would be re-instated in New York State.

Doyle will be obliged to show at his best to win over Hirsh. The latter has piled up a flock of victories since he came East. His aggressiveness and ability to punch have made a hit with the fans. He fights much along the lines that brought fame to Nate Siegal a few years ago. As Nate was always able to cause Doyle trouble, many of the wise men figure that Hirsh is likely to win.

There will also be a couple of eights. Ernie Sawyer of the South End will clash with Frank Merritt of South Boston while Paul Delbalso of Quincy will take Tom Dumont of Biddeford as an opponent.

* * *

The Armory A. A. reports a heavy demand for reservations for the ten-round battle between Pat McCarthy of Roxbury and Johnny Wilson for their world's middleweight champion, which will be staged at Mechanics Building a week from tomorrow night. It is expected that the largest crowd to ever see an indoor boxing show in Boston will be on hand when the rivals enter the ring.

Wilson and McCarthy will be supported by the strongest preliminary card of the year. The semi-final of ten rounds will feature Whitey Allen of Hyde Park and Eddie Record of Nashua, N. H., who recently engaged in a thrilling tussle at the Grand Opera House.

Harry Foley of the North End will have Dinny Glynn of Roxbury as an opponent in an eight-round mill, while Sammy Mares, brilliant Canadian lightweight, will collide with Jack Zaiser of Chicago in another eight-round affair.

Secretary Lewis of the Armory Club, with offices at Room 7, No. 61 Court street, announces there will be popular prices of $1, $1.50, $2 and $3 for the brilliant show.

Stanley Stasiak, mighty Polish wrestler, will very likely secure a bout with Strangler Lewis for the world's title if he wins over Jack Turner in their finish mat bout, best two falls out of three, at the Old Howard's show at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night. Stasiak, a youngster in the mat game, is the most dangerous contender for the title.

John Pesek, Nebraska Tiger Man who has also defeated many of the headliners, would like to have great backing to a bout with Lewis. Pesek, however, is much smaller than Lewis. Stasiak, on the other hand is a giant and is larger than the champion.

Angelo Taramaschi, Italian champion, will also bear watching. Taramaschi still has considerable to learn about the fine points of the mat game, but as he is improving with each start he is sure to be heard from in the future. Unlike Cline, who sailed for Italy on the eve of a bout with Stasiak, Taramaschi does not intend upon hand picked opponents. He is prepared to tackle any wrestler in the world.

Edgar Lothrop and Paul Bowser have stimulated the wrestling game in Boston by insisting upon finish matches. Handicap contests are never satisfactory. When they go the limit, there is always the suspicion in the public mind that the wrestlers did not extend themselves as much as they could. The fact that most handicap bouts have been followed by finish tussles have strengthened the belief that the contestants in such affairs are a business men.

* * *

Of course there are wrestlers who won't sign with Lothrop and Bowser on account of their stand against handicap bouts. We think that the mat game can very well get along without such individuals.

Jack Conway Picks Chapman to Win Over Roache

Jack Conway, Boston American's boxing expert and holder of the world's record for picking winners, hands out the following dope on tonight's show at Lynn:

"Red Chapman is our choice to win over Romeo Roache," says Jack. "These boys have already met twice. As each has a decision to his credit, the going is sure to be fast this p. m."

Jack has picked 31 winners out of his last 32 selections. For the year the Boston American expert has named 147 winners out of a possible 170.

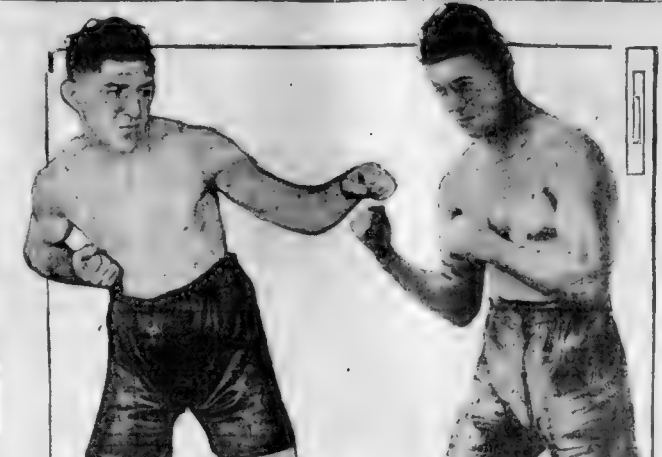
CHAPMAN AND ROACHE MEET AT LYNN



RED CHAPMAN — ROMEO ROACHE

RED CHAPMAN TO MEET ROACHE AT LYNN

Romeo Roche, the Fighting Frenchman, will make his first appearance in eastern Massachusetts tonight when he faces Red Chapman of Chelsea in the feature bout at the Colosseo A. C., Lynn.

These boys have met twice and boxed two of the most sensational contests ever seen in Holyoke, each boy winning and losing a decision.

The Lynn club was fortunate in signing this pair for the rubber bout as it promises to be one of the best featherweight bouts staged in this section in years and hundreds of out of town boxing fans will journey to the Shoe City to see the mill.

Chapman is one of the best boys developed in New England in years and is considered a real rival of Dundee for championship honors.

Everyone who has seen Roche in action speaks well of his ability and a look at his record stamps him as a formidable opponent for any featherweight in the country. He has defeated Kid Kaplan twice, Mickey Traverse twice, Irish Jimmy Dwyer, Jimmy Cooney, Newman Reagan, Jack Zeller, Dutch Brandt, Sammy Stone, Joe Curris, Red Chapman and in his last bout two weeks ago held Lew Paluso to a draw.

Johnny Hepburn, formerly of Quincy but now of New York, will meet Al Corbett of the West End in the semi-final.

STASIAK MUST SCORE 2 FALLS TO WIN

Not since his proposed match with George Calza last year has Stanley Stasiak done such hard work on the road. He is running from eight to ten miles each morning in addition to the regular gym workouts.

He realizes he has a tough proposition to tackle against a real man when he hooks up with Dakota Jack Turner at the Grand Opera House Thursday night.

Turner has asked that the time limit be waived so that it makes the match best two falls in three to the bitter end, no matter how long it may last. Like Howard management will make the men wrestle till one or the other wins two falls.

Should Turner win this match, and many fans believe he will, he will put a big dent in the plans of Stasiak, who figures on a title match with Ed Strangler Lewis if the latter can be induced to come here to meet the big Pole.

The Polish population of Boston and surrounding towns are with Stasiak almost to a man and will turn out en bloc in big numbers to root for him against Turner. On the other side Turner will not lack supporters.

John Kilonis will be in the happiness again, meeting Bill Rudy, the Scissors Hold King. Rudy is a clean gut boy and has a wonderful pair of legs which he uses much as Joe Stecher used his legs. He will impress the crowd with his wonderful ability in this line.

Another bout of interest will be between Charles Marshall, the French light heavyweight, and Nick Bosmes, the Greek star. This bout is a grudge affair and has been hanging fire for weeks. Every indication points to a packed house.

As Danny Edwards found the going tough in the East, his manager deemed it advisable to take him to California. Hell get several good four-round matches there, and he'll be hard to beat, for he travels fast for a short distance.

THREE BIG GAMES ON LIST FOR WEEK AT ARENA

ARENA SCHEDULE

Wednesday—Boston College vs. Boston Hockey Club.

Friday—B. A. A. vs. Aura Lees.

Saturday—Harvard vs. Aura Lees.

The success of a major sport in a college rarely depends on the eligibility of one man. Yet that is the situation of the Boston College team, preparing for its initial game with the Hockey Club Wednesday.

"Tubber" Cronin is the athlete. The Boston College athletic committee has been asked to rule whether this youth is eligible for games, Cronin is a recent transfer from Dartmouth.

He is a brilliant hockey player and would fit nicely on Coach Yeats's outfit. He's a rapid fast shot and could easily be converted into a wing to work the attack with Sonny Foley and Jack Cuhane, other Cambridge Latin graduates.

Cronin's fate as a college hockey player rests with the B. C. athletic committee. O decision will be made before the B. C. takes the ice for its first game.

Boston College picks a strong segment for its game. The Hockey Club proved its ability by badly trouncing Harvard varsity.

Building up a defence is a real job and Coach Foote may convert some of his forwards into defence men. He believe little Benny Gordon has the qualifications and will experiment with the Cambridge lad there.

Familiar faces in the Boston College lineup are Sonny Foley, Jack Cuhane and Jack Fitzgerald.

The visit of the Aura Lees of Toronto here Friday and Saturday rights for games with the champion B. A. A. team and Harvard, means plenty of excitement. Breaking the A. A's winning streak after the latter's fourteen straight wins and later turning back Boston College was the feat the Aura Lees turned in last season. This in itself is sufficient recommendation.

The champion B. A. A. players still are smarting under that defeat and promise plenty of action when they seek revenge in the game here Friday night. The Aura Lees are being groomed for the Eastern Hockey Association this year. This league ranks representing the last word in Canadian amateur hockey.

EMANUEL RE-ELECTED GETTYSBURG CAPTAIN

Gettysburg, Pa., Dec. 10.—Believed to be the best captain the Gettysburg College football team has had in years, Edward "Snaps" Emanuel, the former Harrisburg Tech star, has been reelected captain for the 1924 team.

Emanuel will be a senior next year. He easily made a place on the team in his first year at college. Playing right end during the first two years, he was shifted to fullback by Coach Wood, where he played with great brilliancy, this year.

SOCCER TEAMS IN TIE AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Dec. 10.—The refusal of the Andover authorities to allow Sunday sports in Andover caused the soccer game between the Arlington Mill and Shawsheen teams in the Industrial League to be played on the Pacific Field. A 3 to 3 tie resulted.

RAY ALVIS KEEPS BOXERS BUSY

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 10.—Ray Alvis, manager of Warnie Smith, Oklahoma welterweight" who is now making Chicago his home, has mapped out a busy two weeks' work for his welterweight. Smith has won his last three starts around here by decisively defeated Joe Jackson and Jack Palmer of Philadelphia and Frankie Murphy of Denver.

The welterweights around here absolutely refuse to meet Smith. So Alvis will take him out of his class and send him against four tough middleweights in fourteen days.

Johnny McCoy "The Ohio Hoosier" of the Alvis stable is going like a house afire. He stopped Mut McKee of Oklahoma in four rounds in Shreveport last week and on Monday night of this week he decisively defeated Jackie Feldman of San Antonio, Texas. On the twelfth of this month, McCoy makes his debute in Omaha against News Boy Brown. Jim Mullens, local promoter, is angling for a McCoy-Joe Lynch bout for his club in St. Louis. McCoy is a big favorite with the St. Louis fans. Keep your eye on this little fellow he is coming and coming strong.

FALL RIVER BEATS BROOKLYN AT SOCCER

Fall River, Dec. 10.—Fall River F. C. won from Brooklyn here today 3-2, in an American League game. It was a well played contest despite the rain. Five thousand witnessed the play, which was even. Britian's goal, four minutes before time expired, won the contest.

TUNNEY AND GREB IN TITLE BOUT TONIGHT

By SID MERCER.

New York, Dec. 10.—A modest champion is Gene Tunney, king of the American light heavyweights, who defends his title against Harry Greb, middleweight champion, tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Tunney doesn't regard the boxer as bigger than the game and recently he took occasion to sermonize on this subject for the benefit of several other champions and their managers who had met at the request of the State Athletic Commission.

The meeting was an idea of William McCormick, chairman of the license committee. So many champions have been "stalling" and refusing to risk their titles that McCormack decided he should lecture them.

Gene Tunney

Johnny Dundee, Mickey Walker, Mike McTigue and Tunney were among the champions present while others were represented by their managers. The air was full of bunk and promises. Everybody was willing to TALK fight, but nobody appeared anxious to actually sign for a match.

Finally Tunney got up.

"I think we should give this body (or commission or the help we can," said Gene. "Legalized boxing has made many of us prosperous and the New York commission has done more to establish the game permanently than any other authority. Champions should co-operate with them instead of hindering them. They are trying to help every honest boxer and manager and throw the crooks out."

TUNNEY $18 A WEEK CLERK BEFORE WAR.

"For myself, I can say I think I'm very lucky. Before the war I was earning $18 a week as an office clerk and probably if I had remained at a desk I would not be getting much more now. I learned to box in the army and I have made more money than I ever could in an office. I have invested it and hope to retire with independent means. Why shouldn't all champions begin every effort to keeping the game clean? It makes a good living for a lot of us. The game is the thing. No champion is above it."

Tunney is taking a lay off against meet when he encounters Greb for the second time. The burden of winning is all on him, as is defending his title against a man who does not keep away from him on a decision, while Greb's title is not at stake. The Pittsburger is ambitious to be champion in two classes, and Tunney must be at his best to win. Greb is a freak fighter. He is constantly in a fight and plays up points rapidly although he is not a hard puncher.

BILLY GIBSON NOW MANAGER OF TUNNEY.

Tunney won the light heavyweight championship from Battling Levinsky two years ago but held it only a few months the first time. In this first defense of the title against Greb he was butted on the nose in an early round and lost a lot of blood. The bridge game gave Greb the decision and the title and it was a long time before Tunney could get Greb into the ring with him again. Meanwhile he changed managers and Billy Gibson was behind him in the return match with the Pittsburgh jumping jack. Gibson will be there tonight, too.

In the second fight Tunney managed to keep his nose away from the top of Greb's head. He punched Greb, judges

BOSTON CLUBS AFTER PLAYERS IN BIG CHICAGO MEETING

MAGNATES MAY TRY TO CURB LANDIS POWER

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 10.—More than 2,000 ivory traders and ivory politicians swung into action in the opening sessions of Chicago's big baseball week.

While no paramount issues are included in the events of the day or week, as far as the majors are concerned, the board of arbitration will absorb the spotlight as a result of the famous McCarthy-Williams controversy.

Members of the National Association's high tribunal fired the opening gun at 10 o'clock this morning when the two Pacific Coast League factions got a chance to argue their cases.

McCarthy is standing pat on his charges of syndicalism as a result of the purchase of the Seattle club. He contends the same interests that control Los Angeles control Seattle. He therefore believes that Seattle should not have a right to vote at meetings.

Judge Landis

This vote, cast regardless of McCarthy's ruling, elected Harry Williams as head of the circuit. Now both sides want a definite decision on the case, and none of the eight clubs in the league can consummate any deals until the showdown. Cal Ewing will represent the Ewing faction at the meeting, while Attorney Harry Stratford will act for McCarthy.

Ban Johnson

A score of minor leagues held their annual sessions during the day. Most of these meetings took place at the Congress. The Western League conclab was at the Great Northern.

Tris Speaker and George Sisler were slated to get together in the first of the big deal conferences at Pittsburgh, ably represented by Barney Dreyfuss, will take another shot at Rogers Hornsby.

A new angle on the famous Meusel-Ruth case came to light last night, it is possible Dreyfuss will use the "Rabbit" in a deal with St. Louis, if Rickey will look upon the transaction with favor. Rickey is loaded for bear. His demands for Hornsby will be big, but the Pirates are generally considered the only club that can give the Cardinal that which Rickey craves.

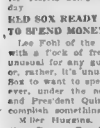
Ty Cobb wants an infielder and he wants him bad. He has his eyes on Jimmy Dykes of the Athletics, but that doesn't mean he'll land him. Frank Chance is ready to negotiate with a couple of Texas League clubs for young pitchers. One of these youngsters is said to be a brother of Dallas. He will confer with Walter Morris some time during the day.

RED SOX READY TO SPEND MONEY.

Lee Fohl of the Red Sox is here with a flock of fresh gold. That's unusual for any guy out of Boston or, rather, it's unusual for the Red Sox to want to spend money. However, under the new regime, Fohl and President Quinn expect to accomplish something.

Miller Huggins, looking healthier than Farmer Cooke, eased into action long enough to promise some ex-tirement for New York fans.

"Going to make a few more changes if I can and they may surprise the wise men," smiled the little leader of the World a Champions.



John Heydler

Pat Moran of the Reds is ready to bid for a second infielder and a pitcher or two if there is such an animal. Pat has plenty of young heavers in his gunning corps, but some of them may come through this past season as he had expected.

President Hack of the Cubs has some deals in mind, but most of them are with minor league clubs. Wilhelm wants a couple of pitchers, but is uncertain whether or not he can land them.

President John A. Heydler of the National League will get in touch with the various magnates and check up the list of topics to be taken up at the annual meeting tomorrow.

The National League prexy has a bandaged right wrist, something that ultimately happens to those who seek golf fame. He doesn't expect it to interfere with business however.

Kinsella, the Giant's scout, is the chief representative for McGraw. Indications point to little dealing on the part of that club at the local sessions unless McGraw gets into town.

BRAVES READY TO TRADE HORACE FORD

Christy Mathewson and Judge Fuchs of the Braves were on the job early, conferring with Dave Bancroft. They want to do some trading, and the wise expect to will shift Horace Ford before the meeting ends.

It is generally expected that some sort of an effort to curb the authority of Commissioner Landis will be made at the joint meeting of the larger leagues tomorrow.

ST. JAMES OFF TOMORROW FOR WEST

Haverhill, Dec. 10—The Holy Cross High School football squad will depart from the South Station tomorrow morning at 10 on their 2,135 mile journey to Colorado Springs, Colo., where they play to decide the school boy football championship of the country on December 12.

There will be sixteen players and two coaches in the party. It will be the longest trip ever taken by an Eastern school eleven. Two special cars are being hitched to the rear of the train starting Friday night and on Sunday. They expect to reach the West in time for the game.

St. James will meet the fastest and greatest eleven in the West. Hyde Park High School claims western and southwestern school championship honors are reclaimed the team will meet Herron, as they have been running up 198 points to the opposition's credit in 6 games.

Joe Frederick has been the big point gainer for the St. James, getting 11 touchdowns, 16 points after touchdowns and two field goals.

St. James will practice on the Polo grounds, Academy field in Chicago during a four-hour stop, and will have light practice along the route. They will arrive in Colorado Springs Thursday afternoon.

'RED' DUNN BEST OF EAGLE OPPONENTS

Two all-opponent elevens have been chosen by Safety, the assistant sporting editor of the Boston College weekly newspaper, "The Heights," Joe "Red" Dunn, of Marquette University was chosen to lead the mythical first team.

FORT WORTH WINS FOUR FLAGS IN ROW

The Fort Worth club set a new Texas League record in the 1923 season by winning its fourth consecutive pennant, the first previous marks being Houston, 1912-1913-1914, and Waco, 1914-1915-1916.

These clubs were tied in one year, while Fort Worth has won four undisputed championships and in addition for five years running has won more games than any other club, losing in 1919 to Shreveport in a play-off after a split season.

Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, and Harry Greb of Pittsburgh are matched to meet at Pittsburgh on Christmas Day.

"Wild Bill" Smiled His Way Through Life

By W. S. FARNSWORTH.

"Wild Bill" Donovan is dead, and baseball fans throughout the country are mourning. His life was snuffed out in the wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited.

He probably died with a smile.

BILL DONOVAN

The writer and Bill were close friends for twenty years and we never saw him without a smile. And well do we remember one night and day that Bill smiled when any other person would have been shrieking with pain. It was the year—I think 1907—that the Detroit Tigers beat out the White Sox for the American League pennant on the last day of the season.

Detroit was hard pressed for pitching talent for that last game while the White Sox, playing on their home grounds, had Doc White at his best. Donovan was told the night before the game that he would have to work. Bill was suffering from a severe attack of neuritis in his pitching shoulder, but did not complain.

He retired early that night, but his pain was so severe that he could not sleep. Finally the dawn broke, dressed, and went over to a dance hall a few blocks from where the ball teams stopped in Chicago in those days. He danced until the last strains of the orchestra died away at about six o'clock.

Fainted After Great Game.

Anything to keep his mind off his suffering. He walked up Michigan Boulevard for miles and miles. But at 7:30 that afternoon he was at Comiskey Park, ready to take his place on the mound.

And before 30,000 fans he pitched one of his greatest games, allowing Chicago two hits and beating them 1 to 0. As he walked to the shower baths after the game he fainted.

That exhibition of grit has never been equalled on a baseball field.

It was "Wild Bill" who gave this writer the tip on the crooked World's Series of 1919 that resulted in the blacklisting of the famous White Sox stars.

We met Donovan on a train going to the Aqueduct race track. Perhaps we made a mistake, but we said that we never saw Donovan without his famous smile. If memory serves us right Bill's face had a bit of a frown on it this day.

Knew 1919 Series Was Fixed.

Bill loved horses and would talk for hours on the dope. We asked him if he had any tips for this day, and his reply was:

"You bet I have, and if you have any luck you will dig out the most sensational baseball story that ever was printed."

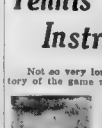
Horses were not on his mind that afternoon. Then he told us what he had learned about the fixing of the series. We followed out his clues, and if we say it ourselves, the American, a few days later, had a swell baseball "beat."

Donovan probably could have made a fortune had he cared to go anything but "straight" while a pitcher. But "honesty" was Bill's middle name.

Tennis Needs Professional Instructors for Beginners

By VINCENT RICHARDS

Not so very long ago one of the greatest tennis players in the history of the game remarked that the day would come when the tennis professional would be as much a part of the equipment of a club as the golf professional is at present.



Vincent Richards

In a word, it is admitted that the only way for a beginner to learn the game properly is to have the proper teaching at the very start of his career. There are certain principles that apply to hitting the ball, footwork and body balance that only an experienced teacher can impart to the beginner.

Unfortunately in America there are very few capable tennis professionals. This, of course, is a direct contrast to the other countries. England has many excellent lawn tennis professionals, while Australia simply abounds in them.

On my recent Mexican tour I was astounded to see the talent that was going to waste in that country because of lack of professional teaching. Mexico City alone has eleven or eight players who have the making of national champions. They need only the watchful eye of a professional teacher who can insure them against a false start.

The main thought in the average beginner's mind is to hit the ball so it will fall into the court opposite him. He does not think how the swing is made or how his feet were when he let the racquet meet the ball. Thus it is that he will never make the same swing twice. In other words, he ends up without the slightest idea of form. A professional, who knows his business, corrects him right on that score. For the betterment of the tennis game in general it is to be hoped that the tennis professional will become more popular in America.

JOCK MALONE REFUSES BOUT WITH KRUG

Newark, N. J., Dec. 10.—Jock Malone of St. Paul, who jumped into the local limelight when he knocked out Georgie Ward of Elizabeth, has refused to meet Phil Krug of Newark, junior middleweight. Local promoters have been angling with the managers of Malone ever since the sensational win over Ward, but none of their offerings have tempted the shrewd managers to sign articles calling for Malone to meet Krug. With the declining of proffered Krug match, the promoters have compromised by signing Maloon to meet Ward in return bout here, January 21.

Phil Krug, while little known outside his own section, has compiled a nifty record in the ring. Successive victories over Mike Gribbons, Mike O'Dowd, Lou Bogash, George Ward, Mickey Walker, Dave Rosenberg, K. O. Phil Kaplan, Alex Frambitas, earned for Krug the respect of men of his weight, but keep him out of ring activity. Clever to a degree of uncanniness, hitting hard and often, Krug is one of the best club fighters in the ring. On his one fight in the West, Krug won over Bob Sage of Detroit, in the latter's home city.

Krug is anxious to show his wares in Boston. His manager, Billy McCarney, veteran manager of boxers is seeking to have the promoters [illegible] and up matches for his charge. According to McCarney a Christmas Day date with the man from St. Paul would be very much to the liking of Krug. "If there are any men to be bowled over, before tying gets the crack at Malone, trust 'em to it" says McCarney. The bout with Malone, however, is the goal of the clever Newark fighter.

BILLY CONLEY AFTER ACTION IN RING

Bill Stacey writes from Bangor:

"You are probably aware of the fact that I had Eddie Trembly for a number of years, but like the rest of his managers, all my pains and cash went for not.

"I am now seeking bouts for Billy Conley, champion middleweight of the Northwest. Sam Lasala light heavy champion of the U. S. Navy, and George (K.O) Becunk, unsored, for welding champion of California. Any of these boys can be had at a reasonable figure.

"I would like to pit Conley against any middleweight the promoters or matchmakers see fit to choose; would prefer Johnny Wilson.

"As for Lasala, he stands ready to meet any of the New England light-heavies, Pat McCarthy, George Robinson, in fact, bar none."

EDWARDS QUINTET LOOKS FOP GAMES

The Edwards basketball quintet of the West End Settlement House, started off its season by defeating the Norman second team, from the Peabody House, 12-3.

The team is composed of L. M Klobanow and Kornitsky, forwards; Weinstein, centre; and Salusas and Captain Romanoff, backs. Games are desired with any 85-pound teams of Greater Boston. Communications may be made with C. R. Edwards, No. 45 Chambers street, at the West End House.

Donovan's Death Casts Gloom Over Meeting

Chicago, Dec. 10.—The death of William "Wild Bill" Donovan, former big league pitcher and manager of the Yankees and Phillies, who managed New Haven in the Eastern League last year, cast a shadow of gloom over the baseball notables gathered here today.

Donovan, who was travelling with former George Weiss of the New Haven club, was killed in the railroad accident which occurred at Erie, Pa.

Although it was thought that most of the eastern baseball men were not leaving the east until today, baseball men manifested keen anxiety in the list of injuries, fearing that other baseball men might have been victims in the wreck.

Word was received from New York tonight that the New York delegation of baseball men started for Chicago today, thus evading the wreck by their late start.

STALLINGS TO BATTLE DRAFT AT MEETING

Chicago, Dec. 10.—George Stallings and Walter Hapgood of the Rochester Club of the International League are standing shoulder to shoulder in the minor leagues' fight against the draft.

The former Boston men will not budge an inch when the draft questions come up for debate at the minor league meetings here tomorrow. Each is opposed to is and will fight to keep the major leagues out of minor league baseball.

Stallings, all the way from his Georgia plantation, is here primarily to kick the draft. He has convinced many moguls that they should not budge one iota from their action of last year against the draft and draft tacked players.

The International League moguls who will meet tomorrow may be forced to change their circuit. There is considerable talk of transferring the Syracuse franchise to Montreal, but most of the magnates prefer Providence to Montreal.

The open date early in the year will probably be alloted to Springfield, which has been trying to get a place on the schedule.

Sport fans are interested to see the return of many of this years' favorites. Marquette semi comes East in the hope of repeating its sensational 1923 victory, and Centenary is anxious to repeat Cornell's feat by beating B. C. in the second meeting.

RAY FISHER TO TAKE MICHIGAN NINE SOUTH

Chicago, Dec. 10—Ray Fisher, the veteran major league star, is coaching the University of Michigan baseball squad. He plans to take his team on a Southern training trip April 11 to Montgomery, Ala. Fisher expects to play practice games with Southern colleges in that vicinity before returning to open the Big Ten season at Michigan against Ohio State, April 26. The Michigan Big Ten baseball schedule follows:

April 26, Ohio at Michigan; 28, Northwestern at Michigan; May 3, Illinois at Michigan; 5 and 6, Minnesota at Minnesota; 10, Northwestern at Northwestern; 12, Wisconsin at Wisconsin; 17, Ohio at Ohio; 19, Iowa at Michigan; 24, Illinois at Illinois; 26, Iowa at Iowa; 31, Wisconsin at Michigan.

800 Basketball Teams For Organization In Cleveland

Cleveland, Dec. 5 (A P.).—Cleveland had a basketball organization made up of 623 teams playing regularly under official supervision last season, with indications that at least 800 teams will be playing this season, according to John H. Gournley, of the Cleveland Recreation Council.

The list includes church leagues, with 198 teams, Dec. 622 teams last season did not include the high schools, junior highs, colleges and a large number of independent quintets.

SYRACUSE ON EAGLE 1924 SCHEDULE

The Boston College Eagles are beginning to get down position they merit. Their 1924 football schedule reads as follows:

September 29—Providence
October 4—Open.
October 18—Fordham.
October 25—Syracuse at Syracuse.
October 25—Open.
November 8—Haskell Institute
November 8—Marquette.
November 15—Centenary.
November 22—Vermont.
November 29—Holy Cross.

The above array is the strongest opposition that bee ever faced an Eagle eleven, and satisfies the cry of both students and alumni for meetings with some of the recognized teams of the country.

Three teams who faced the Heavy this Fall have been dropped, Georgetown, Canisius and Villanova. The two smaller teams have been defeated decisively for two successive years, but the dropping of Georgetown was quite a surprise.

The teams that have been added to take their place are Syracuse and the Haskell Indians. Neither has ever met B. C. The game with "Chick" Meehan's crew will take place four days after the Fordham tilt on the holiday, a rather dangerous position, and will be the only one to be played away from home.

If West Virginia is given the remaining open date, October 25, B. C. will have to do the hardest part of stepping to repeat the success of the 1923 season. Following the open date, the Eagle entertains John Levi and his fellow Redmen. The Haskell tribe was the biggest scoring aggregation in the country this Fall, and this, beyond the fact that they have never played in New England, will add great color to the meeting.

CHARLIE HALL OUTS ST. PAUL OUTFIT

St. Paul, Dec. 10.—It seemingly having been settled that the veteran Charley Hall will not become Mike Kelly's successor as manager of the St. Paul Saints, talk now is that he will quit the club and that President Norton will arrange a trade for him with some club of the Pacific Coast League.

General Electric Rises to New High for 20 Years in Mixed Stock Market

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

"In looking forward to 1924 it appears that the factors which have been most influential in the revival that has taken place are likely to remain effective, at least in considerable degree."

That is the keynote fro Secretary of the Treasury Mellon a annual report, just issued. Since no one is in a better position to know the financial and business pulse of the nation, his view, by an habitually conservative authority should bring genuine assurance and encouragement to all classes.

Indeed, we have been remarkably to quite a number of optimistic pronouncements by the largest of America's employers. Judge Gary, Charles M. Schwab, Frank A. Vanderlip, Walter Teagle, as well as Louis W. Hill and other railway operators, have all been spreading sunshine.

• • •

Now comes President Coolidge with a comprehensive message to Congress which will greatly pleased financial industrial people and has been philosophically accepted by the rank and file of operators, notwithstanding the President's recommendation that the whole freight structure be reorganized. The reception accorded President Coolidge's document has equalled, if not exceeded the reception which was accorded Secretary Mellon's plan for tax reduction. Saturday brought the announcement that the plan for settling Mexico's debts to America and other foreign bondholders has been declared operative.

All this naturally has tended to brighten sentiment. The stock market has responded by a fairly impressive recovery from its recent low level. The average quotation for a group of representative stocks has moved up to the highest point touched since June, and dealings have been unusually animated.

Bonds have also gained in strength, while new offerings apparently have been readily disposed of.

Developments in the money market likewise have contributed to cheerfulness. Interest rates are closing the year lower than had been expected, rediscounts with the Federal Reserve Banks are decreasing rather than increasing, gold continues to pour into the country, and the ratio of reserves to deposits is so high that no doubt need be felt as to the ability of the banks to take care of all the business money 1924 may bring.

The writer spent most of the week at Washington, in rather close touch with administration leaders. There certainly is every desire there to co-operate to the full in helping business and employment.

The administration, however, is as much at sea as the rest of us are concerning how Congress may deal with the President's principal recommendations.

Reports on retail Christmas trade are most satisfactory.

Not quite so uniformly brilliant are the reports from manufacturers. Some industries are still very active; others are slowing down. Either "spotty" or "irregular" would be the best word to describe the industrial position. Buyers in all lines are keeping close to short. However, since this should mean light end-of-the-year inventories and unextended indebtedness, the way should be paved for freer operations after the turn of the year.

When the 1923 business record is cast up, it will be found that the year compares favorably with the most active in our history. And we have a plentitude of assurance from the most distinguished sources that 1924 will open auspiciously.

BEWILDERING PRICE SHIFTS REGISTERED

Stocks were mixed during most of the trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Chicago & North Western was off 2⅝ to its previous 1923 low

Stock prices showed irregularly higher changes at the opening. Heavy buying of Marland was resumed, that stock gaining 2 points. Atchison and Davison Chemical each gained a point, but the Steel shares were heavy. Jersey Central climbed 2 points.

Prices drifted about in a bewildering fashion, in the secondary dealings with, however, a more general trend to the lower levels.

Some active issues like Tobacco Products and Davison Chemical which were up 1 to 2 points, fell back sharply as did also Schulte, Baldwin and American Can.

Marine preferred was particularly weak. General Electric and Continental Can were soft.

General Electric scored another new high on the highest in the past twenty years, up over 3 points.

Speculators for the decline launched a wave of selling around the end of the first hour. Western railroad shares yielded sharply, Great Northern preferred slumping 2¾.

Speculative industrials also registered material concessions with the biggest losses taking place in the Tobacco equipment, motor and accessory groups.

Around noon the market rallied under the leadership of a brisk buying movement for low priced o's. Marland extending its gain to nearly 4 points.

Sweet Arms and Reynolds Tobacco B each touched new 1923 highs.

Despite the unsettlement in sundry trades here at the year-end, 1923 as a whole will go down as a period of better than normal from a business standpoint. From a credit standpoint probably never was there a healthier condition in comparison with volume of business handled. Will make for optimism for 1924.

We pick up to demonstrate the truth of what B. C. Forbes, the Boston American's finance expert, stated this week when he added:

Secretary Hoover

"When you travel through-out the country you hear many commendations of Secretary of Commerce Hoover's aggressive activities. He has almost daily rejuvenated, reinvigorated the Department of Commerce."

From a batch just sent to me, for example, we gather that "Mah Jongg," the new old Chinese game, promises to rival the omnipresent radio in popularity. Exports of "Mah Jongg" sets valued at $446,853 figure in imports of merchandise into the United States from China, for the first nine months of this year, which show an increase of almost 100 per cent compared with the corresponding period of 1922.

Then we learn that the Wing On Company, a Chinese concern conducting large department stores in Shanghai and Hongkong, have acquired about two acres of land on the main street of Hankow for the erection of several buildings which are expected to be completed by next April, Consul General P. S. Heintzleman reports.

They are to be modeled after the Shanghai store and will comprise an amusement section including a moving pic-ture hall and theatre besides the department store.

Next we are informed that a fair market exists in the Sevilla region for rubber heels, according to Consul Ray Of Barcelona. The city is very dry and they will never become as popular as in the Spanish towns of the north, he states.

Seville is paved with uneven stones which cause an abnormal attrition on rubber heels, but the comparative dryness of the rural districts favors their long wear. Old automobiles tires are frequently patched on to the bases of Spanish shoes.

Concluding, we have this:

There are seven motion pictures theatres in Iraq (Mesopotamia), one being at Mosul, four at Bagdad, and two at Basrah, according to Consul Treadwell Cox.

There are no film exchanges in Iraq. The films are either purchased, rented, or imported directly by the owners of the theatres.

STOCKS YIELDING AROUND 10 P. C.

Three weeks are the Boston News Bureau called attention to a group of dividend-paying stocks on the New York Stock Exchange selling to return about a 10 per cent yield at then quoted prices. So pronounced has been the market response, and so evident is the downward trend in income returns brought about by advancing prices that we reproduce the table of stocks referred to with the addition of quotations as of December 8 and income yield at the latter level of prices:

"CAL" WANTS FORD TO HAVE THE SHOALS

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

Washington, Dec. 10 (C.N.S.)—Henry Ford was today in a quandary over President Coolidge's message on Muscle Shoals.

He is uncertain whether the President wants him to have it.

President Coolidge declared in his message that "Muscle Shoals ought to be developed." If cheap nitrate can be made there for the farmers it should not remain idle, he said. The government spent about $200,000,000 on it. The government can sell it, get some of its money back and shake off a permanent expense, he added.

Ford does not want to buy it. He has never considered taking it over. He was willing to spend $50,000,000 of his own money there as a starter and to put the government in for a cost of $100,000,000 in leases, but he believed the government never should let go its hold of such valuable property containing such potential power of good or evil for g's nation.

Ford was not invited to buy the shoals. He was invited to bid to lease it. He is especially bitter against Senator Weeks, because he feels that from the moment he accepted in good faith the request to bid on it, Mr. Weeks has kept awake thinking up plans to keep him from getting it.

As a matter of fact [redacted] Coolidge is very anxious to have Mr. Ford get the shoals. His political philosophy is different from Ford's, however. Mr. Coolidge believes in getting the country out of business wherever possible.

Mr. Ford believes that in basic enterprises and experiments of this character the nation should take a firm hold on it and never let go.

Mr. Ford, however, at present, is disposed to stand pat and let the government accept or refuse his offer unless he receives more definite assurance that there is a real desire to do business with him.

The President's message is likely to raise serious questions in his immediate family. His recommendation to Congress to create a small committee with full power to work out terms for disposal of Muscle Shoals lifts the matter out of the hands of Secretary Weeks.

This is probably the first time since Secretary Weeks went into the cabinet that the administration has avoided the law which gives to the secretary the power to dispose of war properties. Mr. Ford and Mr. Weeks are not friends.

FIGHT FOR HALF FARES WON BY HEARST PAPER

Oakland, Cal., Dec. 10.—This week the results become apparent in the notable victory scored by the Oakland Post-Enquirer in winning for the school children of Oakland and Berkeley, Cal., the right to ride on street cars for half fare.

The victory, the result of a long fight waged by the Post-Enquirer, affects a population of more than 350,000 people.

School children who formerly paid six cents will now pay three cents.

The Post-Enquirer began the campaign for the half fare for school children more than a year ago.

The transportation company at first truculent and stubborn, surrendered agreeing to meet the newspaper's demand. Another significant feat of the Hearst newspaper in Oakland is the carrying of an election for the establishment of a municipal utility district comprising four cities, politically separate, but all contiguous, making one civic unit.

The next important object is the taking over of the water supply system, now monopolized by a private company, which is charging the highest water rate existing in the United States.

Give the Women Teachers Equal Pay for Equal Work

Tomorrow the voters of Boston will decide whether or not they want to give equal pay for equal work in our public schools.

Conditions of labor in our public works have always been a guide to private employer and employe. Conditions of labor in our public works generally is the goal toward which employes in private enterprises struggle.

If the work of a woman is equal to that of a man, upon what theory is she to be denied equal compensation? Upon what theory do we receive compensation? Do we receive it as a charity or as a reward for services rendered? If it is as a reward for services rendered, and the services are equal, upon what theory of justice or logic can the compensation be unequal?

We are not attempting in this editorial to suggest to the voters how they should vote. The question is very simple. But we want to ask for consideration of the subject in the light in which we have presented it. If the work the women teachers do is of equal quality and importance, and wages are compensatory for the services rendered, then we ask the voters how women, justly and logically, can be given less pay than the men teachers.

Encourage the Florist

Send Flowers to Your Friends—Especially to YOUR WIFE

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

"Flowers are always fit presents, because they are a proud assertion that a ray of beauty outvalues all the utilities of the world."—Emerson.

A man with plenty of money was heard to say: "Among my economies I have stopped buying flowers." That is a foolish economy.

Flowers are to the spirit what heat is to the body. The spirit is more important than the body—better save some coal for your furnace and put the money into flowers that will make your children happy, bring spiritual light into your household and give your wife one fewer cause for regret that she married you.

The individual quoted did not say whether he had ceased sending flowers to his wife or some young lady able to hit high C.

Whoever gets the flowers as a present, as Emerson truly says, knows that such a present is a compliment, since it implies that the one to whom the present is given appreciates beauty. When you send flowers, instead of sending something that will last long, you say with your gift, "These flowers are sent to one in whom the spirit outweighs the body," and that is a compliment.

In a Southern city, an old editor was laid up in a hospital. In a theatre nearby, a famous star was acting. She read about the editor, did not know him from any other bald gentleman, but felt sorry for him and sent him some roses.

The editor's secretary, a gay young gentleman, took one of the roses, pressed it carefully, and seemed much delighted to have it. He explained that he was not a victim of foot-ball fascination.

"I want to take that flower to my wife," said he. "She would rather have me bring her a rose that this actress sent than anything else I could bring her."

An actress whose rose, given in charity, is saved by a dashing young man, who gives it to his wife because the wife so greatly admires the actress, can truly say that she has been playing the right kind of parts and has not worked in vain.

Give useful presents, of course. But also give flowers. If you cannot afford those that are expensive, give those that are cheap. There are all kinds.

The florist whose beautiful shop you pass is to the soul of man and woman what the restaurant-keeper is to the stomach.

And the feeding of the soul is as important at least as any other kind of feeding.

Dr. Anderson's Midget Seismograph

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

Dr. Anderson of Mt. Wilson Observatory, in California, has perfected a seismograph, smaller than a portable typewriter. With this the scientists hope to chart seismic movements of the earth and forecast the locality of major earthquakes. Dr. Day, seismology expert at the Carnegie Institution at Washington, declares that this "pocket seismograph" which weighs about six pounds, records earth tremors too slight to be recorded by the old seismographs which weigh from five hundred to a thousand pounds.

The Irish Free State is progressing with its effort to borrow ten million pounds. It seems a State is not a State until it owes somebody.

Baldwin, the British Prime Minister, hadn't even the solid support of his own family in his fight for re-election. His son is a member of the Labor party and is making speeches, denouncing his father's government as "terrible."

Juan Moralada, one of the most desperate bandits of Spain, has been released from prison after serving forty-five years. When he stepped out on the street and saw an automobile he was shocked, and then an airplane came along and he was paralyzed. When he recovered from astonishment he went off to a secluded spot and dug up $500 in gold which he had buried half a century ago, and with this he now plans a village store.

Marconi declares that if experiments now being made are successful, owners of low-powered crystal radio sets on one side of the Atlantic will be able to pick up broadcasting from countries on the other side. He is also continuing experiments with wireless to get a system of sending messages which cannot be tapped by outsiders.

The first Florida strawberries have reached the New York market. There were only twenty-seven quarts and they were quickly sold to jobbers for $2.50 per quart, which means about $5 to the ultimate consumer.

THERE is the so-called straight life policy, under which you pay a small amount for each thousand or one hundred dollars of insurance that you buy, and continue to pay the same amount yearly as long as you live.

What you pay depends on your age at the time you begin, since the whole basis of the scheme is that with enough people doing the same thing, the annual instalments paid by each of them will, with interest, supply the amount promised in case of death as one after another die.

I was very much interested in your editorial about the German Crown Prince. Permit me to differ with you. In Berlin seven years ago I met the Crown Prince. He is a fine, democratic fellow. He could give many of our Beacon street snobs a few pointers on being a good sport.

I think that the lies that have been circulated about him are disgraceful. One of his outstanding features are his honesty and frankness. I say without reservations that I believe him to be the most honest man I have ever met.

Boy Pleads for Family

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a little boy twelve years old and I am writing to see if any of your kind readers could help us along a little. My mother has had it pretty hard for the last six months as my father has been able to work only two weeks steady in that time. Also my baby brother just came home after three weeks' illness, and my father was taken to the hospital ten days ago. My mother has done nothing but cry. I would like to cheer her up a little by getting an overcoat for my brother, ten years old, and one for my brother five, and a pair of shoes for my brother two, as his little feet are on the ground, and, if I am not asking too much, a couple of blouses for myself, as it will be weeks before my father will be able to go to work.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON THE NEWEST THING IN THE WORLD

By Dr. Frank Crane

ONE of the best definitions of civilization I ever heard was given me by General Munthe in Peking. We were discussing the relative merits of the various civilizations of the East and of the West. Suddenly I asked him:

"What is civilization?"

After a moment he replied: "Civilization is respect for what another man is and for what he has."

It seems to me that is very well put. It is the foundation of law, of orderly society and of democracy.

A man has a right to be what he is. He has a right to work out his natural instincts, to gratify his desires, to his own preferences, loves and distastes.

The only limitation to these rights is the right of other people.

Right of Individual

In a condition of savagery, or semi-savagery, the right of a man to his own opinion is not recognized. If he thinks differently from those in authority he is to be punished. The difference between mediævalism and modernism is the difference between professing a belief we do not have and expressing a belief we do have.

Free speech, a free press and freedom of belief become normally the rules of civilized society for the reason that these are the respect of a community of the right of every individual to be what he is.

Civilization must have law because law is not any interference with the right of the individual to be himself, but is a provision against one individual interfering with the rights of another. Law is not the repression of individuality; it is the guarantee of it. Without law there is no liberty.

Taxation Penalizes Thrift

Of course, so long as we are faulty human beings, there will be much property wrongfully acquired, either by fraud or by imperfect laws; but the presence of a considerable proportion of ill-gotten wealth in the community is not nearly so menacing to civilization as the inability to get any wealth at all.

Where there are no laws protecting property there is an automatic law of the strongest, and again we revert to savagery, which is the rule of brute force.

Almost every system of taxation in the world is uncivilized, for almost all taxation amounts to penalizing thrift and efficiency, instead of compelling every citizen to give up a just proportion of his property for the maintenance of government. The income tax, all tariffs and most other forms of taxation are holdovers from barbarism. The principle that underlies them is to take money where you can find it. The underlying principle of any just taxation would be to compel every man to pay fairly for the benefits he receives from government. We have a long way to go before we arrive at a civilized system of taxation.

Civilization can be justly tested by the amount of respect which a nation insures to every man for what he has, and by the degree to which it limits his privilege only by the respect for what other men have and are.

BRICK-BAT BOUQUETS NOW IN SEASON

By Herbert Kaufman

THE President having, at one fell swoop, alienated the support of labor, grangers, the legion, coal consumers, railroad hecklers, debt cancellationists, league fanatics and America-for-Americans, is assured by Wall Street that his message thoroughly suits the speculators.

Had the English elections not conspired with spreading Mexican revolt and word of enormous wheat surpluses in Australia and the Argentine, optimistic bulls would have jumped over the moon.

As it is, the position of stocks significantly reflects capital, capital's sense of security. However, there promises to be numerous slips between cup and lip when the administration's recommendations are put to vote.

Senator Stanfield of Oregon, "the world's largest producer of fleece and mutton," is of course delighted with the White House attitude on present wool and other schedules, but won't mount its bonus wagon.

Senator Capper of Kansas rather favors the World Court, but sulks in his tent when it comes to suggested transportation and tax plans.

Borah would be glad to see "an independent international tribunal, but will fight to the last ditch if it is associated in any way with the league."

Alexanders to the Fore

Seven different schemes for farmer relief were submitted to the House Friday. All the reformers don't agree with Secretary Wallace that the government should sell our overyields abroad at any old price.

Walter Robinson, president of the Northwest Wheat Growers' Association, acknowledging that a 10 per cent. increase in railroad freight rates could hardly be an expense to production, says it costs eastern Washington ranchers $1.20 per bushel to grow grain for which they receive 87 cents.

Humane officers at Hornell, N. Y., investigating a report that the corpse of Lee Allen's infant son was, for several days, used as a "doll" by his wretched brothers and sisters, find the family living in a single chicken coop. Allen allows that they probably dug the ghastly plaything out of the adjacent yard where he interred it. Plenty of work for missionaries in neighborhoods much nearer than the Fiji Islands and Timbuctoo.

We Should Worry

Scandal listening at other keyholes, claims that St. Petersburg crossed Paris editorial palms with a 600,000 franc subsidy to foster enthusiasm for the late Czarist government.

Evidently Abdul Hamid wasn't the only monarch accustomed to purchase French endorsement.

A helter-skelter batch of news, not the least interesting item in which is tidings of seven billion dollars ($500,000,000 deposited during the last year) in United States savings banks.

Seven-eighths of the total money we possess! See what comes of sticking to our own knitting!

STELLA DALLAS By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. These two are now at a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY
Author of "Bobbie, General Manager," "The Fifth Wheel," "The Star in the Window," Etc.

THE first night that Stephen Dallas went to see Stella she exerted herself more than usual in behalf of her caller, for though he was one of the spurned Cataract Mill employes, she was aware that he was as far ahead of the technical school students of her acquaintance, as to requirements for a brilliant marriage, as the technical school students were far ahead of the Cataract Village young men.

Stella had an eye for details. This Mr. Dallas, she observed, wasn't too spic-and-span. He didn't look as if he had just stepped out of the barber's shop round the corner, and he didn't smell so. His cheeks didn't shine. His collars didn't shine, and his clothes seemed to have been worn by him long enough to fall naturally into his lines, instead of retaining those of the wax dummy's with the black mustache in the gentlemen's furnishing-shop on the corner of Main and Webster streets downtown.

When he leaned forward his waistcoat (but Stella called it vest) clung to him, instead of sticking out and making caves and caverns, in which glimpses of lining and suspenders could be seen; and straight across the vest, rather low down, where it wrinkles a little (just where it ought to wrinkle when a man leans forward), Stella observed the slender watch chain made of gold, and platinum shafts, linked together.

She observed, too, Mr. Dallas's handkerchief. He had pulled it out of his pocket and offered it to her to sit on, when she insisted upon occupying the low step of the summer house. She had taken it from him just to feel of it. It was made of finest linen. It had a narrow hemstitched edge, and hand-embroidered letters in the corner.

"What's B stand for, Mr. Dallas?" Stella had asked with the time-worn coyness of her sex when first touching upon so intimate a subject as first names.

"Stephen." Stephen had replied shortly, from the Gloucester hammock.

"Stephen, Stephen," Stella had repeated two or three times—in a dainty, sort of experimental fashion, as if she were tasting some new kind of candy. "Stephen." Then, "It's nice. I like it," she exclaimed and glanced up at Stephen from under her long lashes.

"Really? Do you?" Stephen had laughed, just a little disconcerted. Stella liked the way he said, "Really?" and "Do you?" and later, "Delightful," and "Int'resting." He spoke like an actor on the stage, she thought.

STELLA HAD AN EYE FOR DETAILS

When Stella discovered that her caller was a college graduate, and a college graduate from the same university which Harold Miller and Spencer Chisholm had attended, as well as a half-dozen other young Millhampton blue-bloods, who lived on the other side of the river, and whom Stella knew by sight and reputation, and by their fine houses on upper Webster Street, she was aware that this Mr. Dallas was the biggest opportunity she had ever had.

You might have thought she would have been a little awed, but Stella had confidence in her personal charms. Experience had convinced her that the same upward glance, intimacies, reservations, shynesses, boldnesses, what-not, were attractive to the genus "young man" whatever his species. When Stephen Dallas bade Stella good-bye that first night, he had held her willing hand a moment longer than is conventional and had asked if he could come again.

Later, when Stella went to bed, she tipped the little high square mirror on her bureau well forward and gazing up into it, at her bare, fair expanse of pleasing neck and shoulders, she placed her forefinger on the little brown beauty-spot and pressed it gently.

"I wonder," she whispered.

Short Walk

The distance between Mrs. Bean's lodging house and the little red cottage was only a quarter of a mile. It took Stephen less than ten minutes to walk it. Mrs. Bean's boarding-house was an impossible place in which to spend the evening. The walks around and about the boarding house had come to seem impossible, too. So also had the bare, little-lighted, white-walled reading-room at the Millhampton Public Library.

Ever since Stephen had come to Millhampton (up to the time he met Stella), each night, when he finished his supper in the boarding-house dining-room, he was faced with the problem of killing two and a half hours somehow till a civilized hour for sleep arrived. But after he met Stella, and found the straight, easy way that led to the red cottage, there was no more problem as to how he wanted to spend them.

If Stephen's mother hadn't died just when she did; and if, on top of that, Stephen's sister Fanny hadn't objected, in reply to an application she had made to teach in a girls' boarding school in Japan, summons to call immediately, Stephen's infatuation would probably have burned itself out before he was in a position to consider addition financial burdens of any sort.

Suddenly Stephen found himself free and unfettered. There was no more need to send weekly checks to Chicago. There was no more need to send letters there, or to go there from time to time himself. Stephen was entirely cut off from all old associations, his laboring boat had lost even its dragging anchor, and was touching the shores of a country on the other side of the earth.

Stephen married Stella in January, four months after he first met her. He thought he loved her. Most sincerely he thought he loved her. He desired to be with her—terribly, terrifyingly—more than he had ever desired to be with any girl. Moreover, he felt very tenderly towards her.

He was aware of her limitations, of her little crudities, but what if she did make a few mistakes in grammar, a few mistakes in taste, occasionally. She was wonderfully sweet-tempered, always amiable, always gay, so easily pleased as a child, so easily guided, he believed.

Once, when he corrected her for one of her grammatical offences (she would say "somewhere"; and "would ought" for "would have"; and "got a" for "got to"—"got a-laughing," "got a-going"; and "my" for "his"; and "how does it suit," and "how do you like," without an object), she replied good-naturedly.

"That's right, Mr. Harvard of Shawston, teach me to talk like you do. I'm crazy to learn."

Stephen thought that he could make her cry, rub down the rough edges once they were married, once he had her alone to himself. Alone, to himself! Blinding possibility! Well, well, he must use his head, too!

Of course she was different from the girls he used to know. But he was different from the man he used to be. He required somebody different. Stephen did not want a city girl from the woman he married. Stella was not stepping down to him. Stella did not, pity him.

When he first told her about his father, she replied, lightly laughingly, "Mercy, I don't care what your father did, Stephen, nor your great-grandfather either." Then with disarming honesty, "Gracious, you'd never have looked at poor me unless something had knocked you off your high horse."

No girl who belonged to Stephen's former existence would look upon a hundred and fifty dollars a month as a fortune. Stella did. Nor upon five rooms and a bath in an apartment house in the upper Webster street district in Millhampton, as a palace. Stella did. Nor upon himself, dethroned, cast out, and disgraced, as still a prince. Stella did.

Stephen Surprised

Stephen experienced no crude and sudden awakening. During the first year of their married life, there were surprises for him, gentle shocks almost every day, but nothing shattering. For instance, he was amazed to discover how little education a girl can absorb, and go through a high school and two years of normal school besides. Why, Stella didn't know Thackeray from George Eliot!

"Oh, I suppose I learned about those old fellows once, but you know how things of that sort slip in and out, unless they're dinged in everlastingly."

But didn't normal schools "ding in" such things? Apparently not. Stephen had been counting on the normal school experience. He had dwelt with emphasis upon it when he had first written his sister Fanny in far-away Japan, about Stella.

It was another shock to Stephen to discover how little interest his precious resurrected literary aroused in Stella. Once before they were married she had told him she would simply adore to live in a room with books to the ceiling!

EVERYDAY MISTAKES

Wrong.
"My radiator is leaking bad."

Right.
"My radiator is leaking badly." The verb "is leaking" must take an adverb as a modifier. Hence "badly" should be used.

Wrong.
"He don't love her any."

Right.
"He doesn't love her." "Don't" is ungrammatical, a plural verb with a singular subject. "Any" is superfluous.

Wrong.
"If you fine it, I'll give you half."

Right.
"If you find it, I'll give you half."

The word meaning "to discover" is "find," not fine."

Wrong.
"That hat is the young man I go with's."

Right.
"That hat belongs to the young man I go with."

The first sentence is as awkward as it is ungrammatical. The "young man" is the possessor, not "with."

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

THE boy in the fourposter stirred. He lifted his head restlessly disclosing his pale, drawn face.

Then covering my face with my hands, I staggered back against Ralph's arm. And a cry burst from my lips:

"Ralph," I moaned, 'I can't bear it!"

I fainted, didn't I?"

It was my own voice I heard murmuring plaintively. I stirred and realized suddenly that Ralph's arm was supporting me. Then he cried with a tender brusqueness which brought me to myself completely.

Ann Lisle

"You've just had a bad collapse, Anne. You've been a brick and have strained your nerves a little beyond the breaking point. Now try not to think for a moment. Just relax and try to feel like a tired child who's going to be all rested and better after a moment."

For a second or two I did as he bade me. I was worn out and I couldn't pull myself together. All the hopes and longings I'd felt on the drive home to the old white farm house seemed to turn into mockery. Suddenly I pulled myself upright and began sobbing wildly:

"What's the use of hoping and believing? We'll never find Neal now. I'll never see him again. He's gone. And the sooner I reconcile myself to the facts the better. I won't stand any more of this. I haven't a nerve that isn't pounding and aching and straining so that I fell I'll go mad."

Plenty of Room

"Anne!" said Ralph gently. "Don't you know that this is just a merciful reaction? It's an outlet for your nerves. Go on ahead and cry it out on my shoulder as if I were—Grandma Sampson with plenty of room for you to make yourself comfortable."

At the comparison, and the picture it called up, what Ralph was undoubtedly hoping for happened, and I began to laugh. But after a moment or two my laughter turned into hysteria. I couldn't keep from laughing and crying and shaking with the emotions both called up and increased in turn.

"I was so sure it was Neal!" I cried. "So sure——"

"That's my fault, Anne," said Ralph gravely. "I was sure I made you believe it, too, and now you're paying for my being so positive when I had no right to get my hopes mixed up with my common sense, if I have any."

"Don't be absurd," I said practically. "It's your wonderful friendship that made me so hopeful."

I straightened up in the car and Ralph turned back to the wheel. I had a sudden shamed consciousness that I'd let go of myself, utterly and had lost every particle of self-control. But though my mind was working now and reproaching me for permitting myself to collapse, I was so weak and miserable I didn't know how to pull myself together.

"Can you stand it if I start driving again?" Ralph asked. "Perhaps the rush of the air will be good for you. You aren't the fainting sort, Anne, and the fact that you did go out for a minute shows how hard hit you are and it's all my fault."

"You're a wonderful friend," I managed to say. "You've been the one person to stand by and try to help me. You've been the only one to believe in Neal and try to help me. I—I'm ashamed of my weakness just now. Don't remember it if you can help it."

"Let me remember it!" Ralph said hoarsely.

Started Off

Then he threw in the clutch and the car started off, sweeping down the road in the cool night air. The rush of wind began to blow against my aching eyes and to fill my lungs. The dizziness and choking I'd began feeling passed, and though my heart ached, I could breathe again. After a few minutes Ralph asked with deep concern:

"Shall I stop somewhere and get you a glass of milk or some water?"

"I'd rather go on," I answered. "Sure you're all right?"

"Sure," I declared.

Silence again. And in the midst of my aching desperation over Neal I began to realize that when I came out of my faint I hadn't instantly drawn away at once from the warm comfort of Ralph's strength but had leaned against him, and in my utter weakness of someone to see me through the black moments of despair. Almost as if he were reading by thoughts. Ralph began suddenly to speak, slowly and haltingly.

"Anne, I'm hating myself for leading you off on this useless trip. I should have gone down to the Sampson house by myself. Then I could have telephoned you if there had been good news. And then you needn't have had your hopes so high—and then dashed to nothing. I know you're too good a friend to hold it against me. But a man ought to protect the woman he loves."

SECRETS OF HEALTH

Watch Your Step!

By Charles Reed, M.D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

HAVE you acquired the best habit in walking.

Remember that the correctness of gait in walking is one in which, while affecting locomotion, the organs of the body—especially the organs in the abdomen and head — are spared the shock of successive impacts of the feet against the earth or floor or pavement.

Dr. Reed

There should be a certain amount of spring at the instep, the ankles, the knees and the hips with free motion, front, back and laterally, in the spinal column.

This law is violated when the hard heels of boots or shoes are fairly pounded down by a person who walks more or less stiff-legged and rigidly upright in an otherwise improper posture.

A person walking in that way transmits vibration after vibration to his or her stomach, liver, intestines and other internal organs tending to displace them downward, a condition known among physicians by the barbaric word "splanchnoptosis."

The same vibrations are transmitted through the bony frame, including the spinal column, to the brain and the other nerve centres, tending to produce in them unnecessary fatigue and in certain cases, actual disease.

It is to intercept these shocks and their disastrous consequences that rubber heels have acquired such extensive vogue.

The amount of energy wasted in unnecessary pounding the pavements would maintain half the normal activities of the city.

There is another form of gait, the "intellectual gait," affected by college professors and imitated by certain "digs" among the students, that has been responsible for more than a few physical ills.

The "intellectual gait" is typified by a man with his hat on the back of his head, his chin thrust far forward, his shoulders in a semi-stoop, his upper eyelids drooping in an imitation of profound thought; probably over the one to half-dozen books that he is more or less abstractedly carrying in his arms.

Happily in these more normal times, this particularly mischievous affectation is more or less discredited.

There are special gaits that indicate other diseases of the spinal cord, and brain, disease of the arteries, of the joints, of the muscles.

It is therefore important to remember first, that children ought to be trained to walk normally, that adults with defective gaits ought to correct them if necessary under instruction, and that in all instances in which there is a departure from the previous normal gait, a physician ought to be consulted without delay.

ANSWER TO WRONG HERE PROBLEM

Nothing. It is now permissible to serve dinner on elaborate doiley sets of lace or embroidery.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"The unspeakable Turk."

This epithet was first applied to the Musselman, by Carlyle, in a public letter in the press.

"Circumstances alter cases."

This self-evident truth is found in "The Old Judge," by Thomas Chandler Haliburton (1769-1865).

"I am saddest when I sing."

This thought, which has been often voiced by public performers, forms the burden of a song, "You Think I Have a Merry Heart," by Thomas Haynes Bayley (1797-1839).

"Love leads to present rapture —then to pain."

Everything human has some drawback—even love, as Lelaisi observes in "Sweet Marjoram."

"Dim with the mist of years, gray flits the shade of power."

In these words Byron, in "Childe Harold," recalls the former greatness of Ancient Rome.

"The best laid plans o' mice and men gang aft a-gley."

Take nothing for granted. Burns tells his readers in his poem, "To a Mouse."

"He's a brick."

A form of approval that goes back to the ancient classics. Plutarch credits the saying to a King of Sparta, who said his army was the wall of the city and every soldier was a brick.

"Halvsplitting Distinctions."

This term is commonly applied to attempts to restrict an argument to the narrowest limits. It is found in another form in Butler's "Hudibras"—"He could distinguish and divide a hair 'twixt south and southwest side."

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

THERE are so many sad shows right now, that very few women are crying around the house this season.

THEATRE going most of the weeping in theatres.

EVEN the movies are being turned into wailing places.

ONE wise theatrical producer had his programs printed on handkerchiefs.

MOST managers don't care how much you bawl at their shows as long as the patrons in the gallery don't cry all over the people in the orchestra.

IF you buy a balcony ticket you're not entitled to drop your tears down into the expensive seats.

THE fashionable ladies and gentlemen who sit downstairs, can't be expected to hold umbrellas over themselves.

WHEN a society dame goes to the theatre she doesn't want to wear rubber gloves and a bathing cap.

OF course all the weeping isn't done during the performance. A lot of people start crying at the box office when they buy their tickets.

ONE man who had to pay $3.50 for two seats went into hysterics.

THE manager had to come out and give him a pass to keep him from having convulsions.

A MAN very seldom cries at a play but his wife usually sheds enough tears for both of them.

HE gets sopping from her sobbing.

ONE guy took his bride to a melodrama and she cried so much he thought she wanted a fur coat.

HE had promised her three dresses, two hats and an automobile before he realized that she was only enjoying the show.

SAD plays are a godsend. Any married man will tell you that a little sob in the theatre is worth a dozen good cries at home.

TALK OVER FAMILY FINANCIAL AFFAIRS LIKE PARTNERS IN BUSINESS.

When financial matters come up for discussion in your home, what is the result?

Do you become angry and make accusations that are unjust, harsh and unwarranted, or do you talk matters over calmly and attempt to come to a friendly basis of consideration?

Partners in business do not literally "fly at each other" when it becomes necessary to retrench in expenditures; they talk matters over.

They talk matters over in a calm and thinking way.

You will never get at the truth with anyone if you cannot keep your head in an argument, nor if you throw it up at the others afterward in a sneering way. Don't be extravagant in your words of censure and you may be sure of a more sympathetic effort to cooperate with you.
